The new Bible

NEXT month, a completely new translation of the New Testament will be published in England by the Oxford and Cambridge University Presses in two editions — one, a library edition complete with translators' notes, and a cheaper popular edition. The project has been spread over many years. In fact, it was contemplated before World War II, but the outbreak of war postponed the work.

However, the Church of Scotland, meeting in assembly in 1946 discussed the need for a new translation of the Bible, and shared its concern with other churches. The new Bible is not to replace the Authorised Version, but rather to render the ancient language into modern English, and to clear some rather obscure texts.

For while many will hold that the beautiful language of the 1611 Authorised Version cannot be surpassed, it must be admitted that since the 17th Century, many manuscripts have been discovered, while scholarship in Greek and especially in Hebrew is much more advanced.

THE idea the joint committee working on the new version under the Bishop of Winchester share is, that many who have grown up outside of any church find difficulty in understanding the archaic language of the Authorised Version, while the Revised Version of 1881-1895 never really caught on either with the laity or clergy.

It is hardly surprising to learn of the big demand already for this new translation. Which is really the reason for this comment. For we are told on the one hand that people never read the Bible these days, yet every year, the Bible is a best-seller. The question we ask is, "Who buys all these Bibles?" and a further question might be, "If no one reads the Bible these days, what do people do with them when they buy them?"

Of course, those huge Family Bibles in which were chronicled the domestic affairs of births, deaths, and marriages, have long since ceased to support the aspirin in the front room window, but on the other hand, beautifully printed, tastefully bound Bibles are increasingly in demand, while the earlier fashioned leather-bound Bibles are still the most popular type used by regular Bible readers.

WE must confess that we would be extremely sad if the Authorised Version were to pass from use. Those familiar phrases we first learned when very young; the melodious Psalms which were the friends of our childhood and our stay in later life, are too dear to be replaced.

Yet we see much wisdom in the present undertaking, and perhaps a new generation will find solace, comfort, and courage, because the text rings with the challenge of current speech.

But this above all. No scholarship, no literary values, no pleasant presentation can replace the fundamental purpose of the Bible. This lost, bewildered generation can find its way back to where real life is to be found. The way and purpose is eternal.

Held captive in unidentified house on the Island KIDNAPPED MAN RELEASED

Police satisfied
no
ransom paid

The kidnapers of wealthy banker-merchant Wong Sik-pun freed him at about midnight last night.

Police released this news to the press at 9.30 am today, thus bringing to an end one of the biggest manhunt ever mounted in the Colony.

Wong, father of Wong Ying-kau, the oil merchant who disappeared and was believed to have been kidnapped in June 1959, told Hongkong Police all about his two weeks in captivity in the early hours of this morning.

He got in touch with the Police soon after he was freed and then made a statement to them.

Sixty-year-old Wong told them that throughout his period of captivity he was kept in a house on Hongkong Island. It is not known where this house is. The Police statement said he told them that he had not been physically harmed "during his detention in an unidentified house on Hongkong Island."

Hopes to rest

Mr. Wong Sik-pun

Mr Wong senior is supervisor of the Overseas Trust Bank and adviser to the Bank of Tokyo. He also owns a firm dealing in oil.

Reward extended

Police had offered a reward of $10,000 for information leading to the location of Mr Wong senior. This was extended only last Friday.

The Police search for Mr Wong continued right up till the time of his release. Inquiries had been made in Macao and the New Territories, including outlying islands had been carefully combed for any evidence of the missing banker.

Mr Wong was seized at gunpoint in dramatic Chicago style on the morning of February 10 when his chauffeur-driven Mercedes Benz taking him to office, at about 8.30 was intercepted by the kidnapers' car.

Brandishing guns, the kidnapers forced Mr Wong to leave his car and get into the green Volkswagen in which they had driven up.

Wong's chauffeur was bound and gagged and put in the boot of the Mercedes and this was driven off by one of the kidnapers' gang and left in the car park outside the Government Stadium where the man was later found and freed by Police.

Nothing more was heard of Wong until his dramatic release last night.

A China Mail reporter who visited the Wong home at 18 Perkins-road this morning was unable to interview Mr Wong.

First an amah came to the door and refused the reporter admission. Then Mr Wong's son, who recently returned from America where he edits a small-town paper, came to the door and shook his head when the reporter asked to see his father.

The reporter then waited outside the wrought iron gate of the home until a young Chinese boy came running out and said that Mr Wong was "not up yet".

Later the China Mail reporter visited the home of the Wong Ying-kau family, but was also refused admission there.

C.S. WANG LEAVING

The former chairman of the Hongkong Football Association, Mr C. S. Wang, classified in a deportation order as "an undesirable alien," will leave the Colony for Taiwan on or before March 9, it was learned today.

A Government spokesman this morning confirmed that a deportation order had been served on Mr Wang, but declined to comment further.

Mr Wang, a resident of Hongkong for the past 19 years, was arrested on November 6 last year following the issuing of the deportation order. He was detained for about a month until released on $5,000 bail last Christmas Eve pending a decision on his case by the Governor-in-Council.

It is now learned that the Governor-in-Council has decided not to intervene in the deportation order.

Paratroops land in crowd

Sydney, Feb. 25.

Two army paratroops wearing heavy steel boots plummeted into a thick crowd at the international air pagoda at Avalon, near Sydney, on Saturday.

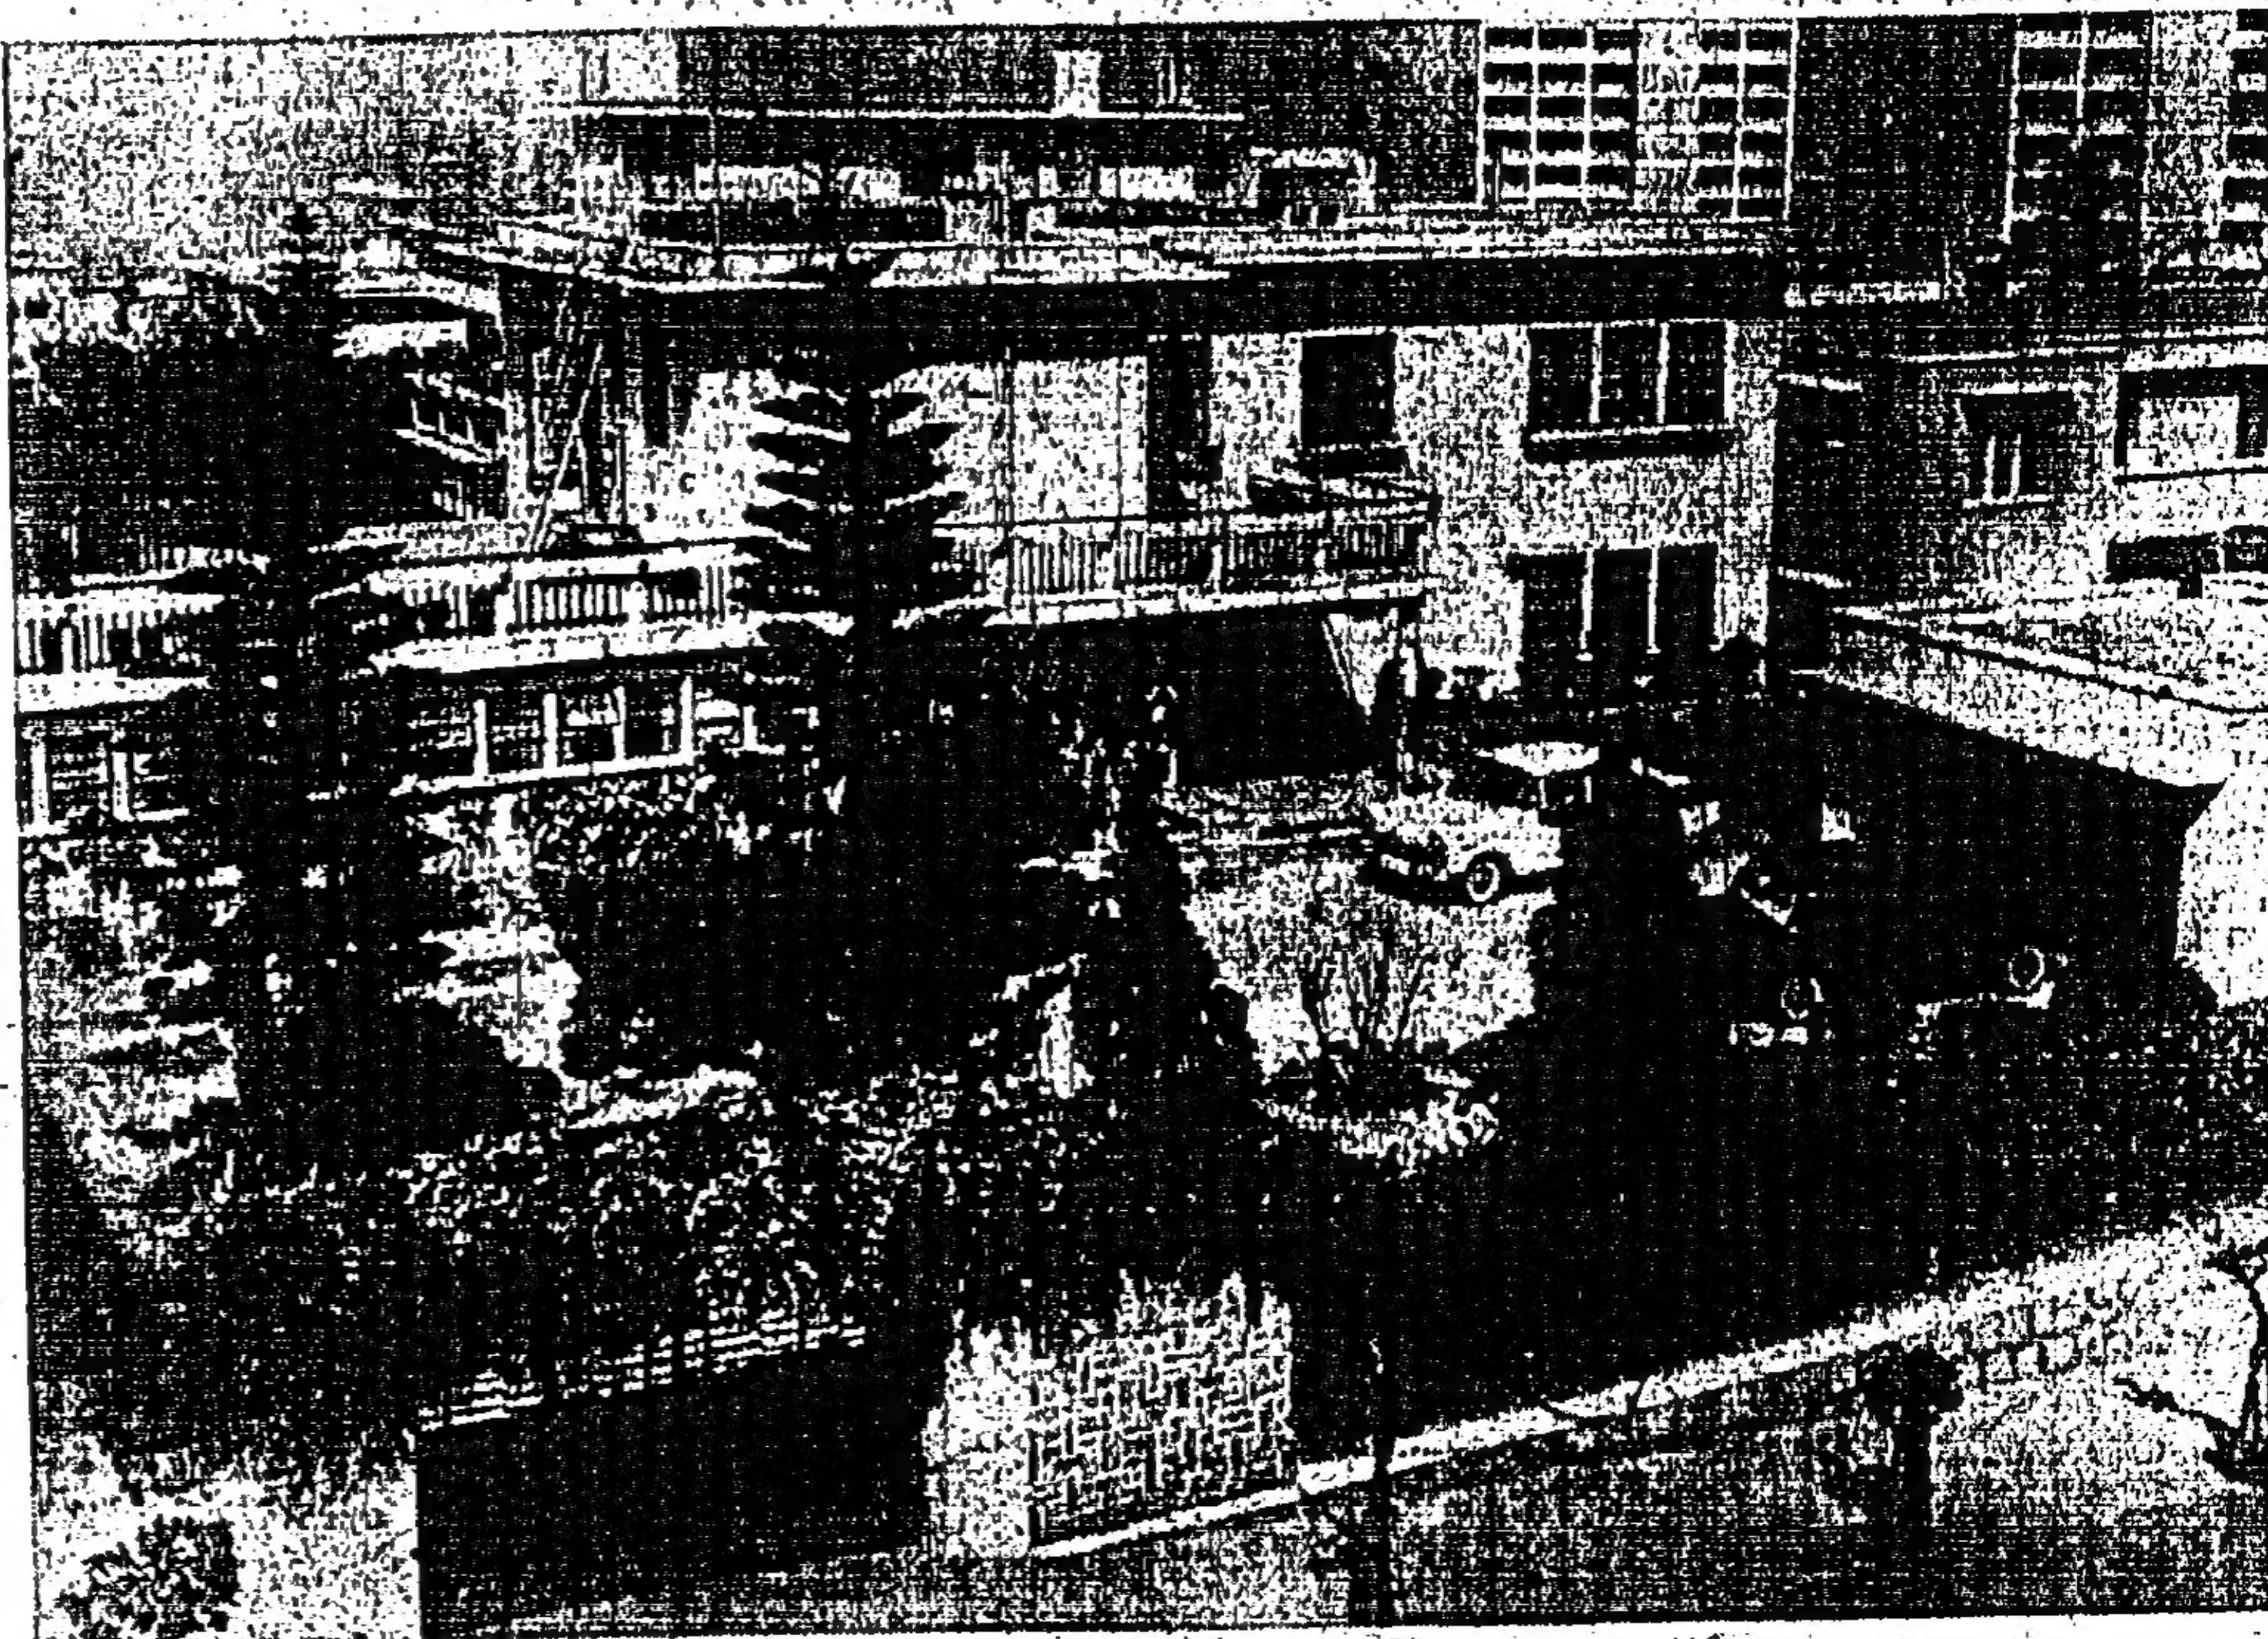

The men, "dressed" for a subsequent "nine jumpers" a shouted warnings to the crowd and achieved control to avoid crashing on to the heads below.

"We could have broken necks had the crowd not scattered," said one of the paratroops. "They heard our warnings and at the last minute clearings appeared and we managed to drop on to firm ground." — China Mail Special.

Istanbul, Feb. 26.

Police raided a ring of forgers and seized five million Turkish liras in counterfeit notes. It was announced here today.

Eleven forgers were arrested, police added. — AP.

SPIKING A BANK

Honolulu, Feb. 27.

Fashionable spike heels on ladies shoes can have the same general effect on a floor as a herd of elephants, a Honolulu bank says.

First National Bank of Hawaii officials said they first noticed pitting in the one-inch-thick marble squares in front of each teller's window.

Curious and puzzled by what was happening to the floor, they photographed the effected tiles. The pictures were sent to a mainland bank building corporation.

The verdict: First National is experiencing the same problem being faced by companies all over the nation — spike heels.

Mathematicians calculate that a 110-pound woman wearing spike heels exerts the same pressure on the floor as an elephant — 1,200 pounds per square inch. — AP.

Will becomes 'best seller'

Philadelphia, Feb. 27.

The Register of Wills Office has a "best seller." It's the will drawn by the late John B. Kelly, father of Princess Grace of Monaco, and 30 copies have been sold at $7 each.

Mr Kelly, Olympic sculling champion and millionaire Philadelphia contractor, wrote his own will because, as he explained in a preface to the document, he always had trouble understanding those written in legal terms.

He went on to say in the document, liberally laced with humor, "kids will be called kids and not 'issue' and he would avoid phrases such as 'per stirpes' and 'perpetuities'."

The $7 charge for the 12 page document results from costs of photostating. Requests for copies have come from law firms, advertising firms, banks, probate offices and one from an unnamed Denver lawyer who wanted a few items of interest for speeches. — AP.

The Queen fulfills cherished ambition

Katmandu, Feb. 26.

The Queen said at a glittering banquet in this "Gurkha capital" tonight that she had fulfilled a long cherished ambition shared by "countless numbers" of Britons when she flew over the terraced hills into the Himalayan valley this morning for her four-day visit.

Russian rescues Scot

Edinburgh, Feb. 27.

A Russian seaman-dived fully clothed into icy harbour waters here on Sunday and saved a drowning nine-year-old Scottish boy.

Jimmy Doyle was on a raft in Granton harbour when high winds blew him against the side of the visiting 2,600-ton Soviet ship Sukhumi. The raft capsize and Jimmy was thrown into the water.

A Russian seaman aboard the Sukhumi threw him a line but Jimmy missed it and started floundering. Another Russian seaman dove in and brought the boy to land.

The rescuer refused to give his name to police. — AP.

ROOFTOPS RIPPED OFF

London, Feb. 26.

Freak winds hurled garden sheds and huts over fences, damaged the roofs of a score of houses, tore down fences and uprooted trees in the village of New Bradwell, Buckinghamshire, during the night.

The wind which raged for seven minutes also carried metal sheets 40 yards to smash through the window of a bedroom where a couple were sleeping. Firemen and police worked with arc lights to clear debris. — China Mail Special.

Many friends

At the banquet tonight, attended by 107 guests, including Sir Edmund Hillary, co-conqueror of Everest, the Queen said Nepal "has been facing the problems of a developing country. I want you to know that you have many friends, both near and far, who wish your people well and pray for their happy and prosperous future."

In welcoming the Queen, King Mahendra said that his efforts to work out in Nepal "a strong, unalloyed form of democracy could not be a success at the moment" owing to "diverse errors and shortcomings."

It was noted here that in contrast to the King's reference, the Queen's reply contained no direct or implied reference to political developments in the Himalayan kingdom, where the King took over political power last December, banning the ruling Nepal Congress Party and naming the Prime Minister, Mr B. P. Koirala, still imprisoned with most of his Cabinet.

Deleted

It was understood that the Queen originally intended to refer to the sympathy with which Nepal's friends were watching the country's search for the forms or big plan for the future.

The reference was deleted after a decision taken early this morning, before the Queen arrived here.

Ex-poachers become keepers

Nairobi, Feb. 27.

The Kenya Government has found a novel solution to the problem of poaching by nomadic Wallangulu tribesmen in Tsavo National Park. They employ the ex-poachers for game control.

Kenya's Game and Tourism Minister, Mr Edward Crossin, said that 25 tribesmen have been recruited by the Game Department so far.

"We've got these chaps working in teams under game scouts' supervision, killing elephants which are damaging crops," he said. "The Wallangulu are traditionally hunters and it's all working out very well." — AP.

Bootleg justice

Waynesville, NC, Feb. 26.

A moonshiner who turned in his still to prove he was quitting the business was fined $1,300 today on charges of possessing illegal whisky.

Benjamin Henry Whitner, 25, talked into quitting the business of bootlegging by legging survey to the highway patrol. He had the still on probation charges. — UPI.

BELGIAN PROPERTY SEIZED

Cairo, Feb. 26.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic tonight ordered all Belgian property in the UAR to be put under sequestration.

President Nasser issued a decree placing all Belgian property under sequestration 24 hours after Brussels severed diplomatic relations with Cairo.

However, it was noted, there are no major Belgian properties left in the UAR. Last year, after the Congo regime of President Joseph Kasavubu severed relations with the UAR, Nasser promptly nationalised all major Belgian concerns in the United Arab Republic, including the Belgian Bank.

In the past, sequestration has meant that foreign property was "put aside" or frozen, pending final disposition, such as nationalisation, but in some cases also return to original ownership, depending on the character of the property. — UPI.

BOY KILLED IN EARTHQUAKE

Tokyo, Feb. 27.

Police said today an eight-year-old boy was killed and five persons were injured early this morning when a fairly strong earthquake shook southern Japan.

Police said five houses were completely destroyed and about 30 others damaged. Four railway bridges and three river banks were damaged.

The Central Meteorological Observatory said the epicentre was about 40 miles off Miyazaki City in Kyushu.

TIDAL WAVE

The observatory said the intensity was five in the one to seven scale or eight to nine in the Mercalli Scale in Miyazaki prefecture.

The observatory issued the tidal wave warnings to residents and vessels along the southern and eastern coast of Kyushu but retracted them an hour later.

The observatory said the earthquake occurred at 3.12 am.

SIX INJURED

Police said later this morning another person had been found injured, bringing the total number of injured to six.

Power was cut off temporarily in Miyazaki City after electric poles fell down.

Police said five houses were completely destroyed and 120 others damaged. They said 19 communication facilities were damaged and roads at some points were cracked. Train schedules were partially disrupted due to damage of four railway bridges. — Reuter.

GOLD OUTFLOW CHECKED

Active week in London market

London, Feb. 26.

Stock moved upwards on Friday after an active week with buyers taking the upper hand.

Higher employment figures, Wall Street's trend, better car sales and a return to more normal conditions in that industry plus the improved look of exports in January—although the board had warned one single month's figures can prove misleading—helped the buying zest.

It was a week of many company announcements, and some like Jaguar and Unilever, proved disappointing bringing weakness in their counters.

Preliminary procedures in other cases have shown some contraction in margins.

The Financial Times Index vaulted 4.6 points over the five sessions with the best performance on Friday which notched three points. The index closed at 328.4 against the 1950-51 high of 342.9 and a low of 293.4.

Many smaller companies outside the index scored good gains.

GOOD GAINS

Blue chip performances over the week showed Unilever 6 1/2% down at 157/8, British American Tobacco 3% off at 65/- and Imperial Tobacco 3/9 lower at 66/-.

Vickers gained nearly 1% to 28/10 1/2. Rolls Royce lost a tiny fraction and Courtaulds were 4 1/2 pence lower at 43/6. Imperial Chemical Industries closed at 70/-, a gain of 3d over the week.

Steels, engineering, motors, textiles and stores all made gains and shipping shares, paced by the P. & O. giant, moved upwards.

Gold mining counters tended a shade better by the end of the week on Cape buying but business had been limited all week. Oil worked higher but their narrow movements with Shell pacing the rise, up 2/3 over the week at 146/6. Ultramar moved up on reported American buying.

Cliff-edged met demand for the dated bonds but the undated issues fell back through neglect.

Dolby stocks moved higher with Wall Street, International Nickel lost 3 points over the week.

Foreign bonds moved through the week little changed but some Swiss buying of Greeks made these ilens stronger on Friday.

Rubbers staged a daily advance, as did leading tens.—UPL.

Wall Street shows 7th gain in a row

New York, Feb. 26.

Stocks registered their seventh weekly advance out of the eight thus far in 1961 in the heaviest week of trading in 27 years.

Sales in this holiday-shortened week totalled 20,000,010 shares, or a daily average of 5,174,152 shares, the highest daily average since the week of July 22, 1953, when 42,320,033 shares changed hands in six days.

Volume the week before amounted to 23,021,055 shares or 4,604,351 shares per day.

The volume of transactions thus far this year has been running nearly 50 per cent ahead of the like 1960 period, and 4.4 million share daily average is well above the record 1929 pace of 4.2 million.

HEAVY VOLUME

But while the sales volume was extra heavy this week, the advance in prices was relatively small. The list made several attempts to pass the June, 1960 recovery high of 856.42 in the Dow-Jones Industrial average, but each time this high was touched, selling set in. Should the list move into new recovery high ground next week technicians see a sustained advance in the cards.

But these same technicians note that the longer this June, 1960, level acts as a barrier to higher prices, the more discouraged investors are likely to become.

As it is now, the business news background has offered very little encouragement to investors. The dominating factor in the price advance has been technical strength, and one of the strongest proofs in this regard continues to be the excess of daily odd lot sales over purchases.

The uptrend also can be attributed to the overall investor optimism over the balance of 1961. And the anti-recession moves in Washington seemed to have a bolstering effect.

Steel production was one bright spot in the business picture last week, rising to its highest level in eight months. But no substantial pickup is expected until April.

Retail sales finally recovered from the bad weather, but most other major business barometers were on the decline last week.

Earnings reports for 1960 continued mixed, but since Sinclair Oil and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer brightened this picture with prediction of substantially higher net income this year.

MOST ACTIVE

Sperry-Rand was the most active stock on the week. Brunswick Corp. was runnerup with 405,400 shares and closed at $57 1/4 up 9 1/4. Sperry-Rand was touted by brokerage firms and Brunswick was said to be ready to cash in on the educational bill being pushed in Washington.

San Diego Imperial, Electrical and Musical Industries and General Electric rounded out the top five of most active stocks.

The Dow-Jones averages finished the week with 30 Industrials at 655.00, just below the June 9, 1960 high of 656.42. The rail average was up 1.17 to 145.46; utilities up .33 to 107.89; and 65 stocks up 1.21 to 221.71.—UPL.

But economic recession deepens

New York, Feb. 26.

If an exact comparison were possible, it could be said that after the first month of the Kennedy administration the U. S. imbalance of international payments has shown more improvement than the economic recession at home.

Most notable on this score has been the slowing down of the outflow of U.S. gold almost to a trickle—only some $115 million left the U.S. in the past four weeks in gold transaction while the international price of gold dropped to its lowest point since the speculation last October.

On the other hand the U.S. recession deepened in many sectors in spite of various pumppriming measures initiated by Washington. The only light spot, and quite significant, is that, was last week's climb in steel production to almost 55 per cent of the industry's capacity, the highest in seventeen weeks.

However, comparison with steel output figures a year ago was still dismal. Output in 1961 to date totals ten and half million tons, some 45 per cent below the same period of 1960.

Consumer spending is down, however, and although bad weather may be blamed to an extent, the deepening of the recession and contraction in consumer income must be considered as factors.

Anti-recession measures, fired off from the White House at unprecedented speed, find only slow going in Congress. The food stamp plan for the needy faces delay and confusion on all levels. There are warnings of the plan's high cost and doubts whether it will increase consumer consumption.

Even so, the various anti-recession measures, as conceived by Kennedy, are considered insufficient by organized labour. The AFL-CIO contends that even if they are all adopted, they will only provide for an economic growth of 3.5 per cent.

This would mean, the organization says, that with the ever growing population, unemployment at the start of 1962 would be seven per cent of the total labour force as against the 6.6 per cent in January 1961.

Among other things labour is pressing for an emergency one-shot tax cut, something Kennedy has been saving for when things get really bad.

One such proposal from the AFL-CIO would have the government withhold $10 less every week from the paycheck of every worker for a period of ten weeks, thus pumping an additional $5,000 million into the consumers' pocket.

The big question mark is would the consumer spend the money? Numerous surveys show that the average consumer is cautious with his spending money at present and the figures for consumer spending, specifically retail sales, in January tend to confirm this. So do figures for business failures (bankruptcies) which in January reached a rate of 61 per 10,000, the highest since the depth of the 1958 recession.

Any tax cut would further imbalance the budget. Already now, the Kennedy administration, moving to pump funds into the economy speedily—funds that originally would have been spent later—fears the tax cut may have to ask Congress for extra money to continue the process in the second quarter last.

Federal funds be shut off just as an economic upturn may be developing. The situation points to an enlargement of the budget deficit for the year ending June 30, recently estimated at $1,000 million.

But in spite of these developments, and in some cases precisely because of them, foreign manufacturers are said to be maintaining a tight grip on their U. S. markets.

Working against them are the rising prices of their products, the sharp U. S. recession and increasing "buy American" pressures.

The biggest factor in their favour is emphasis on the part of American business management to ease the profit squeeze by cutting procurement costs.

Despite some narrowing of the price gap between U. S. and foreign industrial goods, importers still have a substantial price advantage. In steel and aluminium this runs as high as 20 per cent or more. Also importers are in a position to match U. S. products in almost every field because of their increased capacity and because of a slowdown in European demand. Thanks to modern transportation, delivery times are being shortened, too.

One of the factors helping foreign manufacturers, especially in the electrical equipment field, has been the recent price-fixing scandal involving leading U. S. manufacturers.

This is working against the developing "Buy American" trend. Some firms were reported as saying that if they cannot recoup their losses, they will feel justified in seeking cheaper foreign goods.

This trend in favour of continued imports, if confirmed over 1961, would spell trouble for both economic fronts of the United States. It would make a correction of the international payments position that much more difficult. It would also mean continued rough going for scores of U. S. industries.

One good example of this is steel where U. S. production is running far below desired capacity. Yet imports, as a share of U. S. consumption run as high as 52 per cent in barbed wire, 42 per cent in wire nails, 33 per cent in fencing, 31 per cent in wire rods, 18 per cent in concrete reinforcing bars.

Since there is little chance of any import price increases in these lines, some U. S. industry spokesmen think easing European demand could actually lead to intensified price competition.—UPL.

A HECTIC RECEPTION FOR CONTROVERSIAL
U.S. MISSILE SHIP

Holy Loch, Feb. 26.

The U.S. depot ship Proteus arrives in Scotland's Holy Loch this week to set up a floating base for Polaris-carrying submarines—and the occasion promises to be a hectic one. Rival bands of demonstrators plan a terrific reception for the submarine tender and its 950 crew due to sail into the little loch on Friday morning.

One group of pacifists has announced it will try to board the Proteus from a home-made raft with banners protesting against the establishment of the base.

Hundreds more are expected to stage a weekend demonstration at the foot of the heather-covered mountains sweeping down to the lochside.

Yet another anti-pacifist band is preparing to demonstrate against the demonstrators.

DANCE

Local authorities in the area ignored the rising political temperature and went ahead with arrangements for giving the Americans a warm welcome at a reception and dance.

And an appeal went out for "hundreds" of girls to show their pro-American sentiments by coming forward as partners for the sailors on the dance floor.

True to Scottish tradition, posters advertising the dance made a point of mentioning that no charge will be made.

For months Scotland has been in a ferment over the arrival of the Proteus, which will be used to supply and load missiles aboard U.S. nuclear-powered submarines roving the seas off European coasts.

But the British government has firmly declined to review its decision allowing the Proteus to anchor in the Holy Loch, as demanded at dozens of protest meetings.

An Admiralty spokesman said, "No unauthorised persons will be allowed aboard the Proteus."

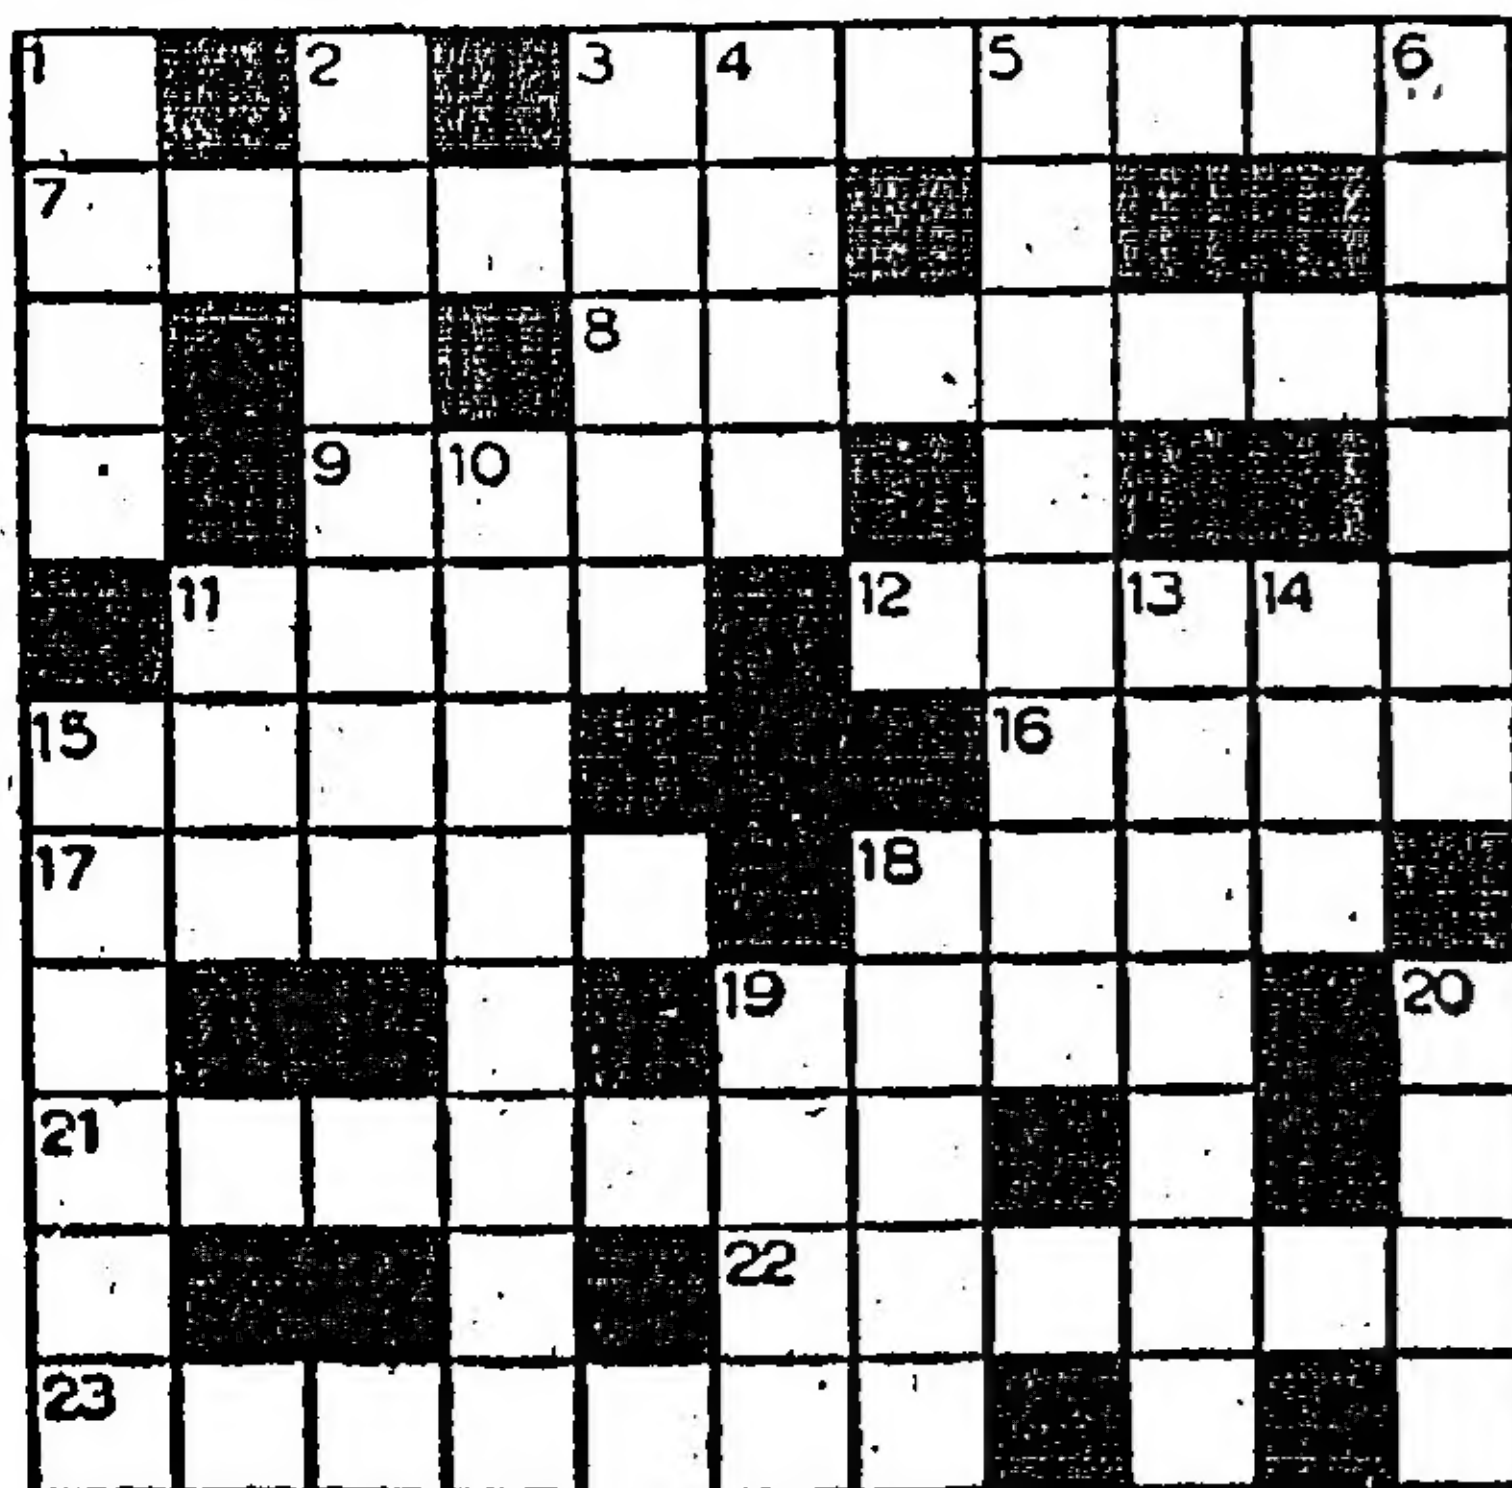

BOMBS EXPLODE IN

Havana, Feb. 26. Eight bombs exploded last night in the "El Vedado" quarter and the residential Miramar suburb of the Cuban capital. It was learned today.

No victims or damage resulted despite the high power of the bombs. One of the bombs went off near a large government building which houses students from Cuban provinces.

Meanwhile, damages resulted from a bomb which went off on a railroad track in Matanzas province.—AP.

FOXY FOWLER CAUGHT
BY DOG

Cowes, Feb. 26.

"Flash," a police dog recaptured William "Foxy" Fowler, who with seven other men daringly broke free from Parkhurst prison here earlier this week.

Fowler, who has escaped from custody four times, was the last of the eight to be caught. After tracking Fowler for a mile, Flash caught him in dense undergrowth near the sea front — only a few yards from the spot where the dog recaptured another escapee last month.

Following a telephone tip-off that Fowler had been seen entering the undergrowth, police threw a cordon around the area and sent in a team of police dogs to hunt for him.

Sealed off

Thirty-seven year-old Fowler, who has boasted that no prison can hold him, was serving an eight-year sentence for offences committed in 1957 after having escaped from notorious Dartmoor prison.

The mass jail break led police to seal off the Isle of Wight and keep a close watch on ferries leaving for the mainland. The eight men made their escape bid in the prison shoe shop on Wednesday. Thirty prisoners closed by as they overpowered two warders, tied them up and climbed the wall.

Four were recaptured almost immediately, two during the night, and one gave himself up early on Thursday morning.

Fowler's two other escape attempts were in 1946, when he absconded from a working party from Cardiff prison, and last month when he was recaptured on the mainland after breaking out of Parkhurst.—China Mail Special.

SWEDISH PLOT IN LIDMAN AFFAIR ALLEGED

Johannesburg, Feb. 26. The Johannesburg "Sunday Times" wondered in a front-page headline today whether there was a "Swedish plot behind the Lidman affair".

Swedish author Sara Lidman, 37, was arrested with 32-year-old African businessman-politician Peter Ntshhe in her flat early this month, then charged with him under the South African Immorality Act. The charge against her was dropped after diplomatic intervention and she arrived last night in Dar-Es-Salaam, Tanganyika.

Under its headline today, the "Sunday Times" asked: "Was Sara Lidman 'planned' in South Africa for the purpose of stirring up trouble? Are certain business groups in Sweden, among them a newspaper syndicate, involved in a plot to create 'incidents' in South Africa to discredit the Union?"

DENIAL

Mrs Lidman, interviewed before she left here last night, emphatically denied that she knew of any Swedish group or newspaper syndicate plotting to embarrass South Africa, or that she was sent here by any such group.

The "Sunday Times" correspondent in Dar-Es-Salaam, meanwhile, today quoted Mrs Lidman as saying of Ntshhe: "I love him and adore him. I know it should remain something between the two of us, but I feel that I want to shout it to the world, in any other country of the world our love would have been allowed to mature unmolested, and he could not even see me off because he is confined by authorities to the magisterial area of Johannesburg, in which Jan Smuts airport is not included."

Mrs Lidman was also quoted as saying that Ntshhe would not leave South Africa because "he has a mission to fulfill."

APARTHEID

The Dar-Es-Salaam correspondent said Mrs Lidman bitterly attacked the South African government, saying that "Apartheid is the most degrading and disgusting system I have ever met with. The Immorality Act should be abolished along with the other hideous Apartheid legislation."

Mrs Lidman said she planned to spend some time in Tanganyika before returning to Sweden. She was also quoted as saying she would like to return to South Africa—a country she said she loves and will miss terribly after having spent six months there—but she said the present government is in power.—AP.

Commonwealth conference dash expected

London, Feb. 27.

The Daily Mail declares today that Canada "will force a head-on clash" with Dr Hendrik Verwoerd, of South Africa, at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' talks in London next week.

With headlines across seven columns on its front page, this Conservative newspaper says that Mr John Diefenbaker, the Canadian Prime Minister, is "determined to force a showdown over South Africa's apartheid policy."

"Advance warnings," the Daily Mail adds, have been given to Mr Harold Macmillan, the Prime Minister, that Canada "will not give South Africa a blank cheque for continued membership of the Commonwealth as a republic."

CLUB OF 12

But Dr Verwoerd, the newspaper goes on, is adamant against any "probation period." He insists on advance approval of continued membership before South Africa is declared a republic on May 31.

The head of the Commonwealth club, Mr Macmillan's dilemma is highlighted because, for the first time the white members are not in the majority.

With Nigeria increasing the club to 12 the line-up now is: Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Central African Federation — India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Ghana, Malaya and Nigeria.

"Sincere attempts have been made by Mr Macmillan and Mr Duncan Sandys, Commonwealth Relations Secretary, to head off any clashes over South Africa's racial policies at the meeting opening on March 8."

"Mr Sandys visited India, Pakistan, Malaya, and Nigeria for top-level talks."

SPEAK UP

"And Mr Sandys thought he had persuaded Malaysia's Tunku Abdul Rahman—who led the attack on South Africa at the Commonwealth premiers meeting last May—to concede apartheid as a domestic problem for the South Africans."

"Like President Nkrumah of Ghana and Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa of Nigeria, the Tunku agreed not to start any moves to condemn South Africa for racial discrimination."

"But all three—Malaya, Ghana, and Nigeria—reserved the right to speak up and back anyone who took the lead against South Africa."

"And now that 'Dief'—as the Canadian Premier is known—has sprung his surprise the anti-apartheid forces will gather strength."—Reuter.

7 die in floods

Birmingham, Feb. 26.

At least seven people perished in floodwaters today as the Alabama River reached its highest level ever, swollen by a week of rain.

More than 10,000 people have been forced from their homes over a wide area of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi by the rising waters of the Alabama, Coosa, Tallapoosa, Leaf and Chattahoochee rivers.—Reuter.

KENNEDY GOING TOO
EISENHOWER

Washington, Feb. 26.

Former U.S. President Mr Dwight Eisenhower believes President Kennedy is going too far to the left, is too partisan and too inclined toward causes favoured by labour leaders, a Republican senator reported today.

Senator Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota told constituents in a news letter that he paid an hour-long visit with Mr Eisenhower at the latter's Palm Springs, California, vacation haunt and he found the former president critical of Mr Kennedy's policies. Mr Mundt added:

"He is critical of the tendencies thus far evidenced by the JFK administration — too much left of centre; too partisan; too slanted toward programme supported by union bosses."

Mr Mundt said the former president was disturbed by statements Mr Kennedy has made that the state economy is in trouble. He continued:

ECONOMY

"The president (Eisenhower) feels that in the main our economy is sound and strong and regrets the tendency by Mr Kennedy to 'downgrade' it since by doing so there exists the danger of discouraging venture capital from being invested in new enterprises (and development and expansion of present enterprises) which otherwise would provide new jobs, bigger payrolls and new taxable profits."

GRATIFIED

Mr Mundt said Eisenhower is "particularly gratified over Secretary of Defence Mr (Robert S.) McNamara's statement that there is no missile gap and pointed out that this was in complete conformity with his own findings."

Mr Kennedy has denied the new administration has made any finding on what he labelled in the election campaign as a "missile gap" between the United States and Russia. He has said a survey he ordered of this situation has not been completed.

Mr Mundt said Mr Eisenhower is working on a magazine article to be published about July 1, "setting out his concept of the programme to be followed by the Republican Party."

Following July 1 Mr Mundt said, Mr Eisenhower expects to make himself available for public addresses and to step up his production of articles—"all devoted to the future of our country, our position of world leadership and his concept of the duty and opportunity of the Republican Party."

"He believes 70 per cent of all Americans are basically 'middle-of-the-roads' desiring to avoid extremism either to the right or the left," Mr Mundt said.—AP.

Morocco mourns
King

Rabat, Feb. 27.

A Royal palace communiqué issued here early this morning said that funeral services for King Mohammed V would take place on Tuesday at 1500 GMT instead of today.

No reason was given for the delay but Palace sources said they thought it was to give many leading figures time to come to Rabat for the services.

A grief-stricken nation today prepared to pay its last respects to King Mohammed V who died yesterday from a "heart-attack" while undergoing a minor nasal operation.

Following his death, his son, 31-year-old Crown Prince Moulay Hassan II, was invested as King Hassan II. It was his son who announced the death in a broadcast yesterday.

Seven days of mourning was proclaimed throughout the country in observance of the King's death. Flags will fly at half-mast and cafes, restaurants, and all places of public entertainment will be closed for the next week.

The King's death — at the age of 51 — came as a surprise.

FAILED AGAIN

Palace sources said that the nasal operation was completed but ten minutes later the King's heart stopped beating. The surgeon in charge immediately opened his thorax and began to massage the King's heart while other doctors were summoned. Injections of adrenalin were also administered.

The heart began again and then failed. Further massage was applied but damage to the brain appeared to have occurred because of the interruption of the blood supply and hope was abandoned.

Late last night, the Moroccan Information Minister, Mr Mohamed Alami, told reporters gathered at his Ministry that "the loss of Mohammed V transcends the national scene."

"The King," he added, "was a symbol for all those peoples who have been deprived of their liberty. The leader of every colonized country considered him as his guide and master... he devoted his entire life to his people and occupied himself in giving them liberty and independence."—Reuter.

One killed in soccer
free-for-all

Buenos Aires, Feb. 26.

One person was killed and three were wounded today as the result of a free-for-all which broke out between fans of the local club and police during a soccer match between Atletico Concepcion and Atletico Central Norte in Tucuman.

The fans of Concepcion surged onto the field, apparently with the purpose of attacking the Central Norte players. Police who attempted to break up the demonstration were surrounded by the fans. One policeman then drew his pistol and fired, killing 21-year-old Francisco Coroba and wounding a younger boy.

The policeman fled to a nearby hospital from which he was rescued later by a large police brigade. During the rescue operation two policemen received serious injuries from the mob surrounding the hospital.—UPI.

VERWOERD
BIOGRAPHY BANNED

London, Feb. 26.

London publishers T.V. Boardman and Company announced today that a biography of Dr Hendrik Verwoerd, the Prime Minister of South Africa, had been banned by the South African Government.

The book—called "Verwoerd—the end"—was written by Mr Garry Allighan, 61-year-old former Labour Member of Parliament.

In an announcement the publishers said: "The book has been banned by Dr Verwoerd, although officially we have been told that the 10,000 copies we sent to South Africa have been held by the customs at Capetown pending further consideration."

Mr Allighan resigned as a Labour Member of Parliament in 1947.—Reuter.

FORCED RESCUE

London, Feb. 26.

The destroyer Carron told the Admiralty today that she was forced to rescue 10 men who had purposely cast adrift in the storm-tossed North Atlantic.

The incident occurred 250 miles southwest of Ireland, a message from the warship explained.

The men involved were all volunteers testing equipment and their own physical endurance.

At a given command they boarded a new type of raft and pushed off from the Carron's side. After 75 minutes the Carron skillfully took the tired, soaked men back aboard after they had radioed that their raft was becoming water-logged.—AP.

Ten missing as boat sinks

Tokyo, Feb. 27.

A 134-ton Japanese tuna fishing boat sank in high waves off the coast of central Japan in the Pacific today and ten crew members are missing, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said.

Fifteen crew members of the No. 1 Azuma Maru were rescued by a fishing boat passing by, the agency said.

It said the boat sank about 50 miles east of Hachijo Island. Hachijo is about 180 miles south of Tokyo.

The agency said two patrol ships were searching for the missing men.—AP.

British action is urged to remove Welensky

London, Feb. 25.

Mr John Eber, General Secretary of the Movement for Colonial Freedom, in a statement issued here today said Sir Roy Welensky, Central African Federal Prime Minister, must be removed from the political scene before there was an "explosion" in Rhodesia.

The movement was formed in 1954 by a link-up of three London-based movements campaigning for colonial peoples. Mr Eber said Sir Roy's policy in cancelling regular police leave and altering police recruitment was another stage in his policy of plunging Rhodesia into chaos, rather than face the realities of Africa.

"We must stress at this critical moment the responsibility of the British government which has allowed Sir Roy to travel so far down this disastrous road," Mr Eber added.

COMPROMISE

Mr Eber said that for both Northern and Southern Rhodesia, wholly inadequate terms had been offered to the Africans at the constitutional conferences.

The British effort had been to attempt a compromise between Sir Roy and the Africans, treating them

Elephant story

Moscow, Feb. 26.

The Moscow zoo denied today that one of its elephants is boarding out in Comrade Kaplina's apartment and said it can't imagine where the "Literary Gazette" got its story.

The Literary Gazette, a very serious paper, on Saturday reported that Kaplina, a zoo technician, took the baby elephant home to nurse it and kept it too long. The paper even had a drawing showing a scientific commission in Comrade Kaplina's flat trying to figure out how to get the overgrown pachyderm through the door.

When Western correspondents began trying to get pictures and more information, the story began to get vague. Finally the zoo denied it.—AP.

Two bodies found

New York, Feb. 26.

The body of four-year-old Edith Kleorius, missing since last Wednesday, was found today in an apartment on west side of Manhattan.

The body of a man was found on the floor, it was reported. The girl had been sought since she disappeared on Wednesday while playing on the pavement in front of the apartment home of an uncle.

She had been taken there by her widowed mother from their Brooklyn home. The disappearance touched off one of the biggest police hunts in New York's history.—AP.

HE'S A STEADY CHAP, SAYS THE MAN WITH A GRANDFATHER FOR A SON-IN-LAW

Bride is 19, bridegroom 69 —his family shun wedding

By A CORRESPONDENT

London, Feb. 26.

Margaret Brannigan, aged 19, married Michael Byrne, a 69-year-old grandfather, in a dawn wedding ceremony at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Glenboig, Lanarkshire, recently. The 50-year gap does not worry her family; but none of Mr Byrne's relatives was at the church.
Shortly after the 40-minute ceremony, the bride's father, Mr Charles Brannigan, told me: "I am very proud of this match. Michael is a good man. He's a steady chap and will make a good husband."

Mr Brannigan is 42—twenty-seven years younger than his son-in-law, who is a widower.
It was a grey, rainy morning when Mr Byrne helped his teenage bride from a car outside the austere church.

Miss Brannigan, in a lilac silk dress, shimmered in the blinding cold as her husband-to-be led her into the church. Guests from the bride's family hurried inside.

Then the doors were closed.
At 8.45, after the congregation had heard Mass and taken Communion, the newlyweds slipped from the church into a waiting car to go to a reception at the bride's parents' home in Monkland-terrace, Glenboig.

Just over 100 yards away, in Glen-drive, is Mr Byrne's home. But none of his children —his eldest daughter is in her forties—had any part in the wedding celebrations.

MET AT WORK

A member of the family said:
"We are not prepared to discuss this marriage. None of the Byrne side will be at the reception."

Meanwhile, at the bride's home, her father talked of his daughter's romance with Mr Byrne. It began when they met a year ago at the brickworks where they both work.
"At first," said Mr Brannigan,
"we were very worried when Margaret said she was going out with Michael."
"There's no point in hiding it... the difference in their ages is considerable."

"Then we saw just how happy they were when together and it changed my mind. I didn't object any further to their wedding."

The new Mrs Margaret Byrne sat, still clutching her wedding bouquet—a Prayer Book draped with roses and satin ribbon—and smiled. "I'm a very happy girl today," she said, and glanced at her husband. "The main thing is we love each other very much."

The age gap doesn't bother Margaret at all. "I've got a wise and good husband," she told me.

And Mr Byrne said: "We are both free and able to marry. I don't see why anyone should make a fuss."

After a short honeymoon, Mr and Mrs Byrne will live in a new home in Contrabridge. Mr Byrne bought it recently.
And among those who saw them leave on honeymoon was her youngest sister—Susan aged five months.

THE LOWER Mystery LEVELS

by Robert Gatecliffe

Light-fingered ones

A director and assistant cashier of the Sheldon National Bank, Sioux City, Iowa—Mrs Bernice Geiger—embezzled the tidy sum of US$2,000,000 during her tenure of office.

The only reason for my taking up this subject, is that I was bursting to let out the horrible pun that "she was one Geiger you couldn't count on."

Now that I've got that off my wheezing chest, I am reminded of a bank clerk way, way back, in the days of my wasted youth.
We'll call him Jones.

It so happened that I'd lost a very nice gold-mounted riding whip which I'd borrowed to make myself look more dashing in a horse show. I might add here that I also got chucked off a ruddy nag onto my aristocratic schnezzle the same day—a bad one.

That night I was becoming my evil luck to a male, and being dead broke, was wondering how on earth I could replace the precious whip. "Don't worry," said the mate, "I'll introduce you to Jones at the bank. He can pinch one for you."

SHOPLIFTER

It appears that Jones was an habitual—or even compulsive, shoplifter. At lunchtime next day, I met the utterly disarming Mr Jones who asked me to businesslike manner to describe the whip exactly. This I did while he nodded full understanding.

"It's easy," said Jones. "So-and-so's have those. I'll go and get it now. But I want ten bob for it, mind you."

Off went Jones full of confidence, telling us he'd be back in about 15 minutes. Sure enough he was—and with two whips.

He used various methods. In this particular case he just walked right behind the counter and took the two whips, telling the sales clerk the advertising department wanted them for drawing models.

As Jones decided he could "trust" me, he offered to procure anything I needed—provided it wasn't nailed to the floor or too heavy to lift. He said many other "travellers" like himself and could always be relied upon to get a nice manure set or some other such impressive present for the girls.

CURIOSITY

Of course you can hold up your mits in horror and call me a receiver of stolen goods.
Somehow or another, we didn't quite regard it as such and grew out of it as time went on.
Out of curiosity, I asked Jones one day, how he managed to keep his paws off the bank's dough. He was shocked at the very thought of it and yelled at me: "Do you think I'm a ruddy thief?"

Many years later, I bumped into an inspector of that bank in another town. In course of conversation, I casually asked him if he'd ever met a bloke called Jones.

"Oh yes," he replied. "Very pleasant chap and one of our best young men."

Some of the tame psychiatrists in the village may be able to explain how a kleptomane like Jones could be such an honest and upright bank clerk. His shoplifting was not motivated by greed as his "fess" were so modest. My theory is that he had a deep-seated urge to be "challenged," and by pilfering his wits against the shopkeepers to lift something (at another person's behest), he "proved" (to himself) that he could beat the challenge.

Maybe by now he's behind bars—but somehow I doubt it.
I prefer to believe he's managing a suburban branch of the bank, is a model of decorum and propriety—and confines his shoplifting to weekends and annual holidays.

A policeman discovered the sharp secret of an hotel's mystery guest, a court was told the other day, when the man drew a sword from his "walking stick" and lunged at his stomach.

David William Graham Allen a 25-year-old printer, of Kenilworth, Kenton, Middlesex, was sent for trial by Telmouthe (Devon) magistrates charged with attempting to murder Detective Constable Derek
Steer.

A broken swordstick lay on the court table and the evidence told how he went to room No. 9 after the proprietress had complained the man was behaving odds.

As he tried to question Allen, he seized what appeared to be a walking stick and drew a sword from it.
"He came right at me, aiming a blow at my stomach," said
Steer.

I managed to dodge two thirds, though the sword passed through my coat. At the third thrust I sensed the blade would enter my stomach. I turned right and felt the blade sink deep into my hip.

"After a tremendous struggle
I beat the blade completely into and it snapped off. Allen fled."

Allen was arrested by Police Constable Edwin Cole at Telmouthe seaford.
Cole said that after the arrest
Allen shined himself over the sea wall.

"But for the fact he was handcuffed to me he would have gone in the sea," he said. Mrs Joan Delbridge, proprietress of Telmouthe Beach Hotel, said Allen arrived carrying only the walking stick.

After three days he had a bottle of white wine with a meal in his bedroom and after that began behaving oddly, walking about the hotel.—Lon-

Successful war against 'army' of bookmakers

Singapore (By Airmail)

Singapore's war against its small "army" of illegal bookmakers operating on the Singapore race course last year has been very fruitful—the takings on the totalisator for 1960 was double that of 1959, although there was a smaller average attendance at the races.

With magistrates handing out heavy fines to those convicted of keeping a book, the small bookies at the race track have all but been wiped out but there are still a number of big-time operators active on the course.

Mr Bath of the Singapore Turf Club described the increase in the totalisator turnover as "spectacular."
He said the figures—$17 million in 1960 and $8 million in 1959—completely and forever disproved the old theory that the club needed the money paid off on the totalisator by the big bookmakers.

Race-day per capita investment on the tote before effective action was taken against the bookies ranged between $23 and $29; since March 1960 it has ranged between $53 and $75.

LEGAL SHOPS

Off-course bookies still exist in Singapore but these will be wiped out of business as soon as the turf club opens its off-course betting offices in Singapore.

Legislation has already been passed in Singapore to legalise these "betting shops," while similar legislation in the Federation is now in Parliament. Once it is made law the Federation will open betting shops.

Then there will be legalised off-course betting in the whole of the Malayan peninsula on race days; and the illegal bookies of today will be out of business.

While the Federation and Singapore move closer towards a common betting law throughout the peninsula, both states are still far apart
as far as lotteries go.

The Federation's state-run Social Welfare Lottery—prices range each month from $100 to $375,000—sells over two million tickets monthly all over the Federation and although they are not sold in Singapore, many Singaporeans cross the causeway to Johore to buy their tickets.

Although under Singapore law it is illegal to be in possession of the tickets, the Singapore Government has usually turned a blind eye towards the possession of such tickets by its citizens.

Now the Singapore Government has decided to increase penalties both in fines and imprisonment for possession of lottery tickets "not authorised by the Singapore Government" which means the Federation's lottery tickets.

This has resulted in a drop in the sales of the tickets in Singapore.

As a counter move the Social and Welfare Services Lotteries board in Kuala Lumpur has decided to stop contributing to charities in Singapore as it has done in the past. Meanwhile, consultations are being carried out at government level but the Federation side is very pessimistic about the outcome of the talks.

Hindus in Singapore are planning to introduce mass weddings to cut down marriage expenses.

Hindu community and religious leaders have been discussing the various aspects of the plan and its economic and social effects on the community.

They feel that the need for mass weddings has been evident for some time but "because of the traditional and religious obstacles, no one was prepared to come forward with a scheme for fear of reprisals."

Now that Hindu leaders are behind the plan, the first mass wedding is expected soon.

After months of relative quiet on the kidnapping front, a gang of thugs broke into a rice mil-lionaire's home in Kuala Lumpur in the early hours of the morning and dragged the hapless millionaire out of bed, bundled him into a car and disappeared.

The police found out about the kidnapping unofficially and even though the family were confronted with the report, they denied that any such thing had happened, saying that the millionaire "had gone to Singapore."

But the 52-year-old millionaire proved to be a stubborn victim. He refused to eat, but the gang refused to let him down his throat to keep him alive.
The millionaire refused to write a note to his family to pay a ransom for his release until they repeatedly assaulted him.

After being held for six days the millionaire was released on Chinese New Year Eve. It cost the family $42,000 but at least he was returned alive.

The last victim that was kidnapped in the Federal capital was found dead in a cemetery.

Visas issued without delay

Hungary opens drive for more US tourists

Washington, Feb. 26.

Communist Hungary is opening a drive to attract more American tourists. The campaign may mark the beginning of a new chapter in US-Hungarian relations.

Hungary's Washington legation was authorized to issue visas to American tourists without delay, a legation spokesman said on Sunday.

The main attraction is not the tourist, but his dollar. State Department officials cautioned.

Nevertheless, it is believed here that the Hungarian regime has made on its mind than the badly needed hard currency. Budapest may anticipate the foreign policy review now being carried out by the Kennedy Administration could change the US position toward Hungary.

Labour plans evening paper

London, Feb. 26.

The London Labour Party is to start discussions about the possible launching of a Labour evening newspaper.

A resolution, passed unanimously at a party conference during the week-end, empowered the London Executive Committee to initiate discussions with the National Executive, the Co-operative Party, the Co-operative Press and the Trade Union Movement "in order to establish an evening paper in the London area, so as to give Labour voice in what is now a Tory (Conservative) evening paper monopoly in London."

This was "considered a matter of the utmost urgency." — China Mail Special.

Boys line up for "Billy Bunter" role

London, Feb. 25.

Tubby British schoolboys including one 12-year-old tipping the scales at 12 stone (168 pounds) are anxious to contact New York casting director Michael Macdonald.

A Reuters report that Mr Macdonald needed five British schoolboys for a new film — one a fat "Billy Bunter" type — brought a stream of applications to a newspaper here. Bunter is the rotund bun-chewing British schoolboy hero of a famous British series of schoolboy stories.

The 168 pounder, the heaviest applicant said he was five feet two inches tall and "I like a bit of fun."

Puerto Rico

Next in the heavyweight stakes were a 14-year-old weighing 11 stone seven (161 pounds) and a 13-year-old, whose proud mother enclosed a photograph. Light-weight applicants included a five stone five (75 pound) 11-year-old who wrote on behalf of himself and his brother aged 12.

"Me and my brother are sending in for the plum roles in the film about 'Billy Bunter', he said, 'I would not like the one for Billy Bunter for I am not fat. Nor would my brother.'

Mr Macdonald wants the boys for a film based on William Golding's novel "Lord of the Flies" to be made in Puerto Rico next Summer. — China Mail Special.

In Odessa before New Orleans

NOW RUSSIANS CLAIM INVENTION OF JAZZ

Moscow, Feb. 26.

Jazz has always been considered here to be a sign of capitalistic decadence, an evil import from across the Atlantic, now that has all been changed.

A jazz lover writes at length in the magazine Soviet Culture that jazz is good honest music — that maybe the Russians invented it, that maybe Dixieland existed in Odessa before it did in New Orleans.

Leonid Olsipovich Utyosov declares: — Jazz isn't a synonym of Imperialism and the saxophone wasn't born of Colonialism."

There was a day when that would have been heresy. But anyone who dines in major restaurants here knows that jazz has taken Moscow by storm. It had long been associated with "silly" boys and girls — young dandies who dance in tight pants and short dresses.

Yet far from being a teenage defender, Utyosov is 65 and speaks with learning about opera and symphonic music as well as jazz. He cites a jazz historian as saying that improvisation is the cornerstone of jazz. And he adds: —

"A man who has no talent can't improvise. Talent is as money: if you have it you have it and if you don't... Utyosov then proceeds to separate the jazz beat from Wall Street: —

"Jazz with its roots goes not to bankers' safes but to poor Negro quarters. Jazz music has existed for a long time and New Orleans style was not the discoverer but only a stage in its development.

"In Odessa long ago musicians always improvised at weddings and this gives grounds to say that so-called Dixieland existed in Odessa before New Orleans."

The writer comments that commercial jazz is good, mentioning George Gershwin and Jerome Kern as major contributors.

In summary, he wrote: — "Good jazz is art and bad jazz is not... everything is changing. New times, new songs, let's create those new songs that will be worthy of our Soviet epoch." — AP.

London, Ontario, Feb. 26.

Counterfeiting has grown into an industry in Canada, grossing nearly $250,000 (about £50,000) a year, a Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman told a Printers' Club meeting here.

At least 50,000 printers in North America have the knowledge to turn out forged notes, he added. — China Mail Special.

Speculation on rocket's course

London, Feb. 26.

British scientists were wondering tonight if the Russians have already corrected or are in the process of correcting the course of their latest spaceship between the Earth and Venus.

Last weekend's report stated that the rocket would pass not more than 110,000 miles from Venus. This weekend's states it will be less than 62,000 miles from the planet at its nearest point.

This may just mean that the Russian scientists, with more information about the rocket's course available, have been able to plot it more accurately. It could also mean that steps have been taken to reduce the "error."

The Russians now state that the rocket has an orientation and guidance system. The guidance system is almost certainly a system of gas jets or rocket motors which could adjust the speed of the interplanetary station or change its direction. The orientation system would be used, during an attempt to correct the course, to line up the station, probably by reference to the sun, so that the rocket motors will be fired in the exact direction desired. — Reuter.

Australia bans 'Lady C'

Canberra, Feb. 25.

The unexpurgated edition of "Lady Chatterley's Lover" will remain banned in Australia, the Customs and Excise Minister, Senator Norman Henry announced.

Senator Henry said the Government had arrived at its decision after examining all the aspects, including the recommendation by the Commonwealth Literature Censorship Board that D. H. Lawrence's novel should be released.

The book was referred to the board after last November's English court ruling that "Lady Chatterley" was not obscene. The minister is free to accept or reject the board's advice. — China Mail Special.

BRAZIL'S ANSWER TO CASTRO

A revolution and, for a change, a bloodless one. It is taking place in South America, hot bed of insurrection, where JANIO QUADROS, new President of Brazil, aims to change the country's whole way of life

Eight years' jail for unpaid £265 WIFE-HATER FRED WINS FREEDOM

From ALAN WATKINS

NEW YORK.

AFTER spending eight and a half years in a Woodland, California, jail, his 67-year-old Fred Bloek is free. His offence: refusing to pay £265 to his wife under a court order. And he has still not paid. He was released "in the best interests of the taxpayers."

Fred said he did not want to get married in the first place. He explains: "Just farming along with my brother I was happy."

"But this woman—she was a schoolteacher—she was all the time crowding me: 'Let's get married, Fred; let's get married.' I tried to stall her as much as I could. But when a woman sets her mind on marriage, there's nothing a man can do unless he joins the army or leaves the country. A marriage-minded woman can wear an elephant down. I finally went and did it."

That was in 1926. The marriage was never ideally happy—although there were two daughters—and 10 years ago the break-up came.

CHOICE

Fred objected to paying all the bills when his wife was working. "She wanted me to pay everything," he said. "I got so mad I threw her out of the house and locked the door."

"Next thing I knew the cops came and got me and threw me in jail. They let me out, and I stayed away from her."

"But pretty soon, the law came after me again with a court order in August 1951, saying I had to pay 750 dollars ($225)."

The next July a California superior court judge offered him the choice of paying the money or going to jail. Fred chose jail.

Though he made two unsuccessful escape bids, Fred was not unhappy. He received hundreds of fan letters from every part of the world—all from men. And in jail he never did any heavy work.

He describes the routine: Get up at seven. Eat breakfast. Clean up a little. Lie around. Play cards. Talk with some of my friends. Eat lunch. Rest up. Play cards. Read a bit. Have supper—food's pretty good. Watch television. Go to bed.

"Man can hardly beat that sort of life on the outside," he says.

PRINCIPLE

Fred's wife, now divorced, remarried and working in Sacramento, California, refuses to give her side of the story. Her lawyer says:—

"I am going to do everything possible to collect that money for her. No man in this country is beyond the law. A lot of of people think he's off his rocker. The truth is he's crazy like a fox.

"He's got more than 4,000 dollars put away. He just does not want to pay it. Fred's worn down the county and they have let him go free. If I have my way, he'll go back to jail."

Bloek confirms that he could afford the money. "Sure, I had more than 750 dollars. I could have paid my wife any time."

But he is adamant. "I'm going to fight her to the last ditch. Because it's not the money, it's the principle. She just don't deserve it."

LOYALTY: A NEW ANGLE ON THE GILBERT HARDING CONTROVERSY What should a servant tell?

by GODFREY WINN

"It is amusing to tell these stories now. I was not amused at the time. Gilbert in a towering rage was an awe-inspiring sight. I had not known him for very long, and I won't pretend that I wasn't frightened of him."

This is what Mr. Roger Storey writes in his book published about his eight years as private secretary to Gilbert Harding.

Of course, Mr. Storey need no longer be afraid of Gilbert's wrath. But why he should think it "amusing" to shatter the public image of the man I do not understand.

I certainly did not find the stories that the ex-secretary has to tell at all funny, for they consist chiefly of what the author describes as "disfiguring incidents," dug up now for public display.

Mr. Storey admits himself that he has "either the knowledge or experience to attempt a biography." And what emerges now many will feel is in poor taste.

And not just that.

* Gilbert Harding (Dorset and Rockliff $15).

Because doesn't it seem downright disloyal for a private secretary to rush into print with a book like this at any time, let alone only a few weeks after Gilbert Harding fell dead on the steps of the B.B.C.?

I have never met Gilbert Harding's ex-secretary, but his employer always spoke enthusiastically about his qualities: his helpfulness, his patience, and, above all, his loyalty.

So when I read at the time of his funeral how his secretary had been led away, weeping, from his master's grave, I felt pity and sorrow.

I find myself wondering now whether my sympathy was not misplaced.

It is not that the book is in any sense a concentrated vicious attack on the master, the hand that fed him.

Instead, on almost every page there are sly digs, such as a reference to the return of his employer on one occasion from abroad "flamboyantly influenced by duty-free liquor on the homeward plane."

The author admits that when Harding took him into his service he had achieved nothing in his own career. An unsuccessful, small part actor, he had given up the stage and taken a post as a secretary, poorly paid because he had never studied shorthand.

When he came to Harding his salary was £9 a week.

Soon his employer had raised it to £1,000 a year, with a generous yearly bonus into the bargain. Finally he was made a director of Gilbert Harding's company.

And all the time he was being given an entrée to a way of life that was not only beyond his financial but also his social and mental means.

He confesses so himself: "My job gave me a social standing which with my normal provincial middle-class background and lack of attainments I had never known before."

In the course of the next eight years, Mr. Storey had the privilege of meeting a multitude of the famous figures of the world of entertainment, politics, and public affairs.

What brilliant and stimulating conversations he must have listened to. Yet nothing of that side of his master's life is recounted.

Instead, except for the recurring revelations of rows and drunken brawls, it is all trivial, written down in the flat, unexciting style of someone who, one can't help feeling, has nothing to sell except his chance.

He is a right-winger and takes pride in his country's growing economic achievements. With good reason. He can claim to have been personally responsible for many of them. As a famous Dutch admiral once swept the seas with a broom tied to his masthead, Quadros uses the broom for his symbol as he sweeps away the web of racketeering which centuries has entangled Brazilian life.

Quadros was born in Mato Grosso, the son of a doctor. He read law and taught literature in a small secondary school. But as the years passed he became increasingly dissatisfied. For he realised that because so many middle-class Brazilians kept clear of politics and asked only for a quiet life, power was in the hands of a corrupt few. He was disgusted with much of what was going on around him and determined to change it.

Brazilian politics have always been boisterous with more than a hint of farce. In no other country could a local election have been won on a write-in vote from rhinoceros; only in Brazil could a goat be elected to a city council. Such goings-on were commonplace until Quadros' broom swept into action.

Quadros set out to clean up Sao Paulo where he was living in 1947. With no political machine to back him, with only his meagre wages to finance his campaign, he talked his way into the city council. His opponents were contemptuous of this ragged firebrand with his unruly shock of black hair, his Groucho Marx moustache, his dark, restless eyes. They were convinced he would never rise further.

They were wrong. He was elected Mayor of Sao Paulo City by an overwhelming majority. He became a State deputy. Within a couple of years his battered hat hung in the entrance hall of the luxurious State governor's palace.

Quadros was the most unorthodox governor in Brazilian history. He wrote dispatches to the Cabinet in verse, but how-ever much their billing wit made the Government and the public laugh, few failed to realise that his poems were a veiled attack on many aspects of Brazilian life.

He was determined to clean up Sao Paulo. He ordered every man and woman on the State payroll to report to the tax and revenue offices on a certain morning for what he described as "a personal inspection." So many turned up that they could hardly get into the legislative building, some arrived without even knowing where they were supposed to work.

JANIO QUADROS, "the tramp who talks like a don," is capitalism's answer to Fidel Castro. This shabbily-dressed ex-provincial schoolmaster and former lawyer is 43 and entered politics only 13 years ago. Now he is the new President of Brazil, South America's largest republic, and is Castro's one rival for the emotional leadership of Latin-America.

By
Simon Kavanaugh

He is a right-winger and takes pride in his country's growing economic achievements. With good reason. He can claim to have been personally responsible for many of them. As a famous Dutch admiral once swept the seas with a broom tied to his masthead, Quadros uses the broom for his symbol as he sweeps away the web of racketeering which centuries has entangled Brazilian life.

Quadros was born in Mato Grosso, the son of a doctor. He read law and taught literature in a small secondary school. But as the years passed he became increasingly dissatisfied. For he realised that because so many middle-class Brazilians kept clear of politics and asked only for a quiet life, power was in the hands of a corrupt few. He was disgusted with much of what was going on around him and determined to change it.

Brazilian politics have always been boisterous with more than a hint of farce. In no other country could a local election have been won on a write-in vote from rhinoceros; only in Brazil could a goat be elected to a city council. Such goings-on were commonplace until Quadros' broom swept into action.

Quadros set out to clean up Sao Paulo where he was living in 1947. With no political machine to back him, with only his meagre wages to finance his campaign, he talked his way into the city council. His opponents were contemptuous of this ragged firebrand with his unruly shock of black hair, his Groucho Marx moustache, his dark, restless eyes. They were convinced he would never rise further.

They were wrong. He was elected Mayor of Sao Paulo City by an overwhelming majority. He became a State deputy. Within a couple of years his battered hat hung in the entrance hall of the luxurious State governor's palace.

Quadros was the most unorthodox governor in Brazilian history. He wrote dispatches to the Cabinet in verse, but how-ever much their billing wit made the Government and the public laugh, few failed to realise that his poems were a veiled attack on many aspects of Brazilian life.

He was determined to clean up Sao Paulo. He ordered every man and woman on the State payroll to report to the tax and revenue offices on a certain morning for what he described as "a personal inspection." So many turned up that they could hardly get into the legislative building, some arrived without even knowing where they were supposed to work.

Political appointees who had been drawing fat salary cheques for years without doing an hour's work found themselves hailed before a grim-faced panel of Quadros' financial experts and ordered to do some fast explaining.

Within a few months Sao Paulo was turned into the most prosperous and honest state in Brazil. The public were delighted with Quadros; when he announced he would oppose Mar-shal Lott in the presidential elections they rushed to his support, wearing the symbolic broom in their lapels.

The campaign was crowded with drama. Ignoring opponents who sneered that he had deliberately torn holes in his suits before appearing in public, Quadros delighted in his role of the little man standing up to the massive political machine.

Only at the last moment did the powerful right-wing party, the National Democratic Union, offer him support. And he accepted it on condition that he was not bound to carry out their policy if he took office.

Unhappily, dishevelled, Quadros went to his office. His motto was: "The penny against the million," his policy, when he was pressed to outline it, was "adaptable according to circumstances."

Now that he has moved into the magnificent Presidential palace in Brazil's new capital, Brasilia, Quadros is getting down to the task of improving the national economy.

He has declared it his aim to turn Brazil into a Western consumer's paradise before Castro manages to dominate the entire continent. To rid her of the inferiority complex which has for centuries been a feature of Latin-American outlook—the product of fear and ruthless exploitation by foreign countries.

He insists that Sao Paulo should be regarded as an example of successful capitalism, that Brazil is brawny enough in her own right to treat the foreign investor as a working partner rather than a potential slave owner.

He is no doctrinaire. He is willing to talk to Castro, Khrushchev, President Kennedy and anyone else with something to offer. "To hell with ideologies—business is business," he says. But he is certain that capitalism can raise living standards faster than any form of state socialism.

Quadros does admit to being strongly pro-British. He is an avid reader of British history, has studied her constitution, and he owes her doctors a personal debt of gratitude. Last year he came to London for an operation which saved his left eye. The head of the world's greatest coffee producing nation has also made the startling announcement that Londoners brew better coffee than New Yorkers.

Quadros is married to a charming brunette named Eloa. They have one daughter, pretty 16-year-old Dirce, whom Brazilians affectionately call Tulu. Her popularity reached a peak during the election campaign when she slipped quietly away with a 24-year-old newspaperman and married without fuss in Sao Paulo.

Not a word about these incidents appeared at the time. The secretary was admirably discreet then.

Why drag them out now, when the fire and fury of the protagonist's life is over? Have they any real, any lasting importance at all?

Of course, there are many references in the book to Gilbert Harding's work for charity, and his generosity. He was, as everyone knows, a most generous man. And I will take a bet that when his will is published shortly it will be shown that a sum has been left to the secretary.

But more than money was bequeathed to Roger Storey. He was also left the high trust of his office, the title that he uses with pride upon the cover of his book—PRIVATE Secretary.

Where is the privacy now? I can't help feeling that many other readers beside myself, as they turn over the pages, will feel a sense of shame for the dish-up of all this squalid little-little.

Loyalty to one's country, to a creed, to an employer, is only part of the most important loyalty of all: loyalty to one's inner conscience.

And if even in Mr. Storey's position I could not have written this book, could you?

HE JUST COULDN'T POP THE QUESTION

SCENES FROM MARRIED LIFE. By William Cooper. Macmillan, 16s.

MARRIAGE seems all too easy for most men to fall into. Before they know where they are they're hooked, and perhaps only their brides know exactly what happened.

But to Joe, the narrator of this extremely funny novel, it was just the opposite. He simply could not get himself married.

There were lots of girls, and all the conditions of marriage were present except the actual ceremony.

He found himself continually putting off the act of proposal until eventually the affair was terminated or petered out.

This inability was, as he and his friend Robert decided, "his recurring pattern."

ALL TROUBLE

Readers of Mr Cooper's brilliant earlier novel, Scenes from Married Life (now reissued by Penguin Books at 3s. 6d.), and strongly recommended, will have met Joe and his recurring pattern before.

In that book he was a young man. Now he is approaching 40 and the pattern persists.

Joe (like the author himself) is a novelist and a civil servant. His novels are highly praised but do not sell very well. He is only a temporary civil servant, a war entrant, and is continually in trouble with his pompous, permanent bosses.

In fact he only keeps his job by the cleverness of his influential friend, Robert, who is a few years older and a rung higher in the Civil Service.

This is the story of how Joe decided to tackle his recurring pattern, which is going full swing when the novel opens.

Sybil has got browned off with being kept hanging about, and has left him. But meanwhile he has met Elsiebeth, and decided in a flash that she is the one for him. She gets virtually installed in his Putney flat. But that proposal of marriage, which he keeps meaning to make, never will come out.

It gets more and more embarrassing until at long last, almost by accident, it one day does. And before minds can be changed, they're blithely up in a matter of days.

The amazing thing to Joe is that marriage so long delayed turns out to be a wonderful success. But there are other ups and downs, two particularly nasty ones. He all but gets manoeuvred out of his job, and it takes all Robert's skill to out-wit the enemy.

Then his new novel runs into obscenely trouble. The novel has described sex (as this one does) as actually enjoyable. The publishers are scared and call in their fathead lawyer to persuade him that such a view is likely "to corrupt and deprave any young people into whose hands it should fall."

So witty

Mr Cooper has a delightfully sly, conversational way of putting over his comedy. He might be sitting with you in your room, sipping your brandy, and talking about his life and the people in it. So witty and beguiling is he that you would keep filling his glass in the hope that he wouldn't stop.

And you wouldn't notice he had not through a whole bottle, much less complain. It would have been so well worth it.

COMING: THE CRAZE FOR CULT CLOTHES

LADY LUCK
your CHINA MAIL
horoscope

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 27

AQUARIUS (2) (January 21-February 19): A temporary coolness between you and your partner should not be taken too seriously. You will soon make it up with each other.

PISCES (11) (February 20-March 20): This would be a favourable day to attend to an important task you lacked the confidence to tackle earlier.

ARIES (5) (March 21-April 19): By giving sufficient thought to the preparations for a family gathering, you can avoid some embarrassment which otherwise might result.

TAURUS (6) (April 20-May 20): A meeting with some congenial people at a friend's home could enlarge your social horizon immeasurably.

GEMINI (7) (May 21-June 21): Faced with a problem which needs a careful decision, don't depend on your usual luck, but treat it with the seriousness it deserves.

CANCER (4) (June 22-July 21): You will soon see the funny side of a situation which embarrassed you greatly at the time.

LEO (3) (July 22-August 21): You will be strongly attracted to a person with whom you will come in contact on the occasion of rendering a social service.

VIRGO (8) (August 22-September 22): Make time for a hobby which interests you greatly. It may dovetail neatly with your work as it develops.

LIBRA (1) (September 23-October 22): Arrangements for a business trip may have to be changed at the last minute, but events will prove the altered time more favourable to your purpose.

SCORPIO (12) (October 23-November 21): Clear up a misunderstanding which otherwise might mar a budding friendship.

SAGITTARIUS (10) (November 22-December 21): An interesting proposition ought to be considered not only on its own merits, but as a means of furthering an important business association.

CAPRICORN (9) (December 22-January 20): Money from an unexpected source will make possible a domestic improvement you have long desired.

YOUR LUCKY NUMBER: Count the letters in your first name and add the total to the number shown in brackets after your sign of the Zodiac. This is your lucky number for the week.

LONDON.
A MINOR revolution is being started in the fashion world — by the girls who refuse to conform. Tired of losing their waists, tired of the ricocheting hemline too, they're sticking out for clothes that suit their personality and telling high fashion to go hang.

Uncrowned queen of the non-conformists is, of course Brigitte Bardot, who sparked off a craze for plaid that left the top fashion designers gasping.

Chief henchmen in this craze are the girls in their teens and early twenties, angry young women of fashion who don't see why they should all dress alike even if Dior says so.

A FLAIR

Chief dressmaker to the cult girls is Mary Quant, a Chelseaite in her twenties who makes clothes with a definite flair about them which owe nothing to the Paris couturiers. When I want to know what is the current cult craze, I always ask Mary.

What's coming into fashion right now? Glitter-pants, for one thing. They are made from soberly cut dogtooth check fabric which is gold-flecked, and sparkles unexpectedly as you walk.

The cult girls wear them with plain gold 'chain-mail' tops.

The Arab shirt which Mary Quant spotted in North Africa is now selling to the cult girls as fast as it can be unloaded onto the shop counters.

STRING

It is made from fine knitted cotton, looks like Grandpa's best shirt without its collar, and comes in some wonderful colours — my favourite version has shocking pink stripes.

It is cheap and pretty, and can be screwed up into a ball and thrust into your suitcase without suffering. Arab shirts are worn with very plain denim jeans or, newer still, a dead-plain skirt cut from brown denim.

Cult girls who are handy with their needles are making themselves shirts out of knitted string. If you can stand the strain of coping with string and huge wooden needles, you end up with a sweater that is surprisingly soft to wear, gives a rough and tough texture that goes well with casual clothes.

This week I met a dynamic blonde who takes the personality cult still further, and believes that you should not only dress to suit your type but your Zodiac sign as well.

ABOVE RIGHT: This collarless, semi-fitted suit in purple Shetland tweed has a long matching stole pinned at the shoulder with a Cairngorm brooch.

JANE ROGERS
Fashioned in London

Her name is Heather Barnes and she spends her time lecturing to organisations up and down Britain, trying to persuade men and women to brighten up their way of dressing.

Soon Heather will be marketing her own designs of cult clothes, keyed on the signs of the Zodiac.

Personality dressing takes some practice. If you're used to doing what Paris dictates. If you are the pretty, feminine type, then look for soft, dreamy fabrics like chiffon, cady, textures such as mohair.

If you are sophisticated, then pick some of the new abstract prints in sombre colours, and for evening crops silk or rayon cut into simple clothes with a good line about them.

If you are the country-loving type, then go for rough-textured tweeds all the time and even wear a tweed sleeveless dress for cocktail, dressed up with masses of gilt jewellery.

Finally, if you are the kind of who is 'with it', who likes to be one step ahead of the rest, then the field is wide open for you.

Two new ideas coming up on the horizon that I have photographed, which might have been made for you are the long plaid evening skirt — I picked it in yellow and black — and the suit with its own matching stole, speared with a giant brooch.

STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

An Air Mail Letter

—Chirpie Receives A Letter From Red Robin—

By MAX TRELL

CHIRPIE Sparrow came to the window sill for his morning bread crumbs and Knarf and Heald, the Shadow Children with the Turned-Around Names, were waiting by the window, the inside-the-roomside of the window—to greet him.

It was a cold, windy, Winter morning. Chirpie Sparrow lighted on the window sill.

But he didn't return the good-morning greeting of Knarf and Heald. He just kept nodding and shaking his head. Then they saw why he didn't answer. He had what seemed to be a bit of paper in his beak.

"Chirpie! What's that you've got in your beak?" Heald asked.

"Got a letter! Got a letter!" Chirpie answered all in a jumble of chirps with his beak shut.

"He says he's got a letter," Knarf said to Heald. "He says take it, take it. Isn't that what you just said, Chirpie?"

Chirpie Sparrow nodded.

Took the paper

Heald put out her hand and took the bit of paper. It was about the size of a postage stamp.

"That's what it is!" Knarf exclaimed. "It isn't a letter at all! It's a stamp!"

"Good-morning," Chirpie was now saying. "Hold on to that letter, please. Don't let the wind blow it away. I just received it. I haven't read it yet."

"But it isn't a letter, Chirpie dear," said Heald. "It's only a postage stamp."

It's a letter

"Oh no, it's a letter all right," Chirpie insisted. "Just look at the writing on it."

Heald laughed. "That isn't writing, Chirpie. That's printing. Do you know what it says? It says AIR MAIL."

"No, no, no," chirped Chirpie. "That isn't what I mean. The writing is on the other side! Just look at the other side!"

So Knarf and Heald looked on the other side of the postage stamp. They didn't see any writing. At least, it wasn't the kind of writing they were used to. They saw some black marks. "It looks like the footprints of a Bird!" Knarf suddenly exclaimed.

Heald looked again. She was surprised to see that her brother was right. The black markings on the back of the stamp were in the shape of a Bird's feet. It looked as if a Bird had stuck his feet in an ink bottle, or perhaps in thick, black mud, and had then stepped down on the back of the stamp.

From Red Robin

"It's a letter," Chirpie kept saying. "It's an air mail letter from my friend Red Robin. He's down South where it's warm. He's there for the Winter. This is his letter. The wind blew it up to me."

"But if it's a letter," Knarf said to Chirpie, "what does it say? How can you read it without any words?"

"Well," said Chirpie, "you don't always have to have words to say something. Red Robin is telling me that he feels fine. He wouldn't be dancing over that stamp if he didn't feel fine!"

Knarf and Heald agreed that Chirpie was right.

"And now," said Chirpie, "I'm going to send him an air mail letter telling him that I'm getting plenty to eat this Winter."

"What's that you've got in your beak?" Heald asked Chirpie.

"How are you going to do that, Chirpie dear?" asked Knarf.

"I'm going to do this," said Chirpie.

And Chirpie rubbed his beak against a bit of dust on the window sill, and made the mark of his beak on the stamp right across the mark of Red Robin's feet.

"Red will know what I mean!" said Chirpie gleefully.

And then Chirpie picked the stamp up and let it go flying off with the wind, for after all it really was going by air!

Rupert and the Winter Sale—19

The lady is so agitated and talks so fast that the shopman cannot get a word in. Rupert screws up his courage to interrupt. "Go away, go away, little bear," says the man. "I'll see to you in a minute. This matter is more important. Yes, Madam, my process. But Rupert won't be it was."

aligned. "I really think I can help," he insists. "I was shopping with my Mum when I dropped my parcels and something dropped near me and disappeared. Something reddish in colour. Oh my, if only I could remember just where in the shop it was."

THE PETIT FOURS TRAY

by Helen Burke

THESE Viennese shortbread tartlets are made of a most adaptable mixture. It can be piped into tiny cases as used in boxes of chocolates or in larger small cup cake sizes. And they can also be piped into fingers, rings, stars and figure 8's—indeed, anything as your fancy suggests.

I use half plain and half self-raising flour because plain flour alone makes them slightly uninteresting and if all self-raising flour is used the tartlets break up, entailing a certain loss.

Cream 7oz. butter very well. Have ready sifted 4oz. each plain and self-raising flour and 2oz. caster sugar. Gradually mix half of them into the butter and then add half teaspoon vanilla essence. Add the remaining dry ingredients and beat well to a soft consistency.

Place the mixture in a piping bag filled with a small star pipe (for small paper cases) and a large one (for larger ones). Pipe into the paper cases, in a circular movement, finishing with a slight depression in the centre.

Bake for 15 to 20 minutes at 400 degrees F. or gas mark 6. When they are cool, sift a little icing sugar over each and pack a little red currant jelly in the centre.

Another way is to pipe swirls, stars or large S's on to a flour-dusted baking sheet and bake them as above.

A very professional way is to sandwich cold thin swirls or fingers with melted chocolate and then dip one end of each "petitfour" into melted chocolate.

The approximate cost of these tartlets is 2s. 6d. (London Express Service).

TRAIL-BLAZING A NEW ERA OF FASHION?

by Peggy Massin

Paris. EMPHASIS on a natural waistline belted by wide sashes is the keynote of Hubert de Givenchy's spring fashion collection, shown to journalists three weeks after buyers and private clients made their appraisal.

The new silhouette is evolutionary without dramatic change, but Givenchy may well be trail-blazing a new era of fashion.

Dresses remain stark pillars of architectural structure with no sleeves, no collars and no nonsense. They have supple bodices above easy gathered skirts. Hemlines remain a knee-cap length.

A few late-day clothes ignore the waistline in long tubular effects, paired with side-biased flounced hem-bands. Coats are voluminous, cut in wide sandwich board treatments with deep-set bat wing sleeves.

SKI-JUMP DIPS

Shoulders are sloped, and often drop as sharply as a ski-jump. Horizontal seaming, yoke insets or curved sections vary the coats.

Also on display are loose jackets ranging from waist to hip-bone length, with yoke treatments, big fancy buttons, and contrasting overblouses. A white slubbed linen suit is accompanied by a black kid overblouse.

Collarless necklines are emphasised by separately cut long muffler scarves, in fabric matching the print blouse or contrasting toned hat.

Givenchy is preoccupied by light colours, headlining the range of brilliant yellows and candy pinks, with accessories almost always in oyster white. Numerous string and putty-coloured ensembles are contrarily shown with flower-bright bowler or cloche hats.

EXTREMELY FANCIFUL

Late-day millinery is extremely fanciful. Givenchy shows parasol hats with organdy brims spreading to the shoulder blades. He completely hides the face of one of his beautiful oriental mannequins with a giant black organdy handkerchief.

Other special features are slim cocoon capes styled without armhole slits, an inch-wide revolved fringe edging street-suits, and abstract geometric silk prints in sombre colours.—Reuter.

Homework — it's not children who hate it...

A LOOK around the schools highlights homework as this term's most controversial subject. And the stepping up of the homework situation (longer hours, younger children doing it) all points to more work for parents.

Mitcham schoolgirls have announced that distractions make it impossible to do homework at home. They prefer to stay on at school instead.

At Streatham a headmaster complained that boys were prevented from doing homework because their parents gave parties.

At Newark, Nottinghamshire, 75 per cent of the pupils in a secondary modern school asked for homework because they were bored with television.

TOO TOUGH

It seems that it's the teddy-addicted and scally-minded parents who most hate homework. "It was bad enough so has the attitude to work—they seem to like it."

Mr W. J. Langford, headmaster of Battersea Grammar School, says that his boys do homework varying from an hour-and-a-half a night to four hours.

HECTIC

OTHER parents, other views. He makes concessions by setting homework two days or a week in advance so that boys can adjust their timetables to include an occasional outing with their parents.

There is more more homework than there used to be, she says. "I set more myself. I give them both something to do as soon as we arrive home, pack and sport until high tea at six, then off to their respective then start on three hours' prep.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

SOUTH thought to himself, "If it weren't Friday the 13th I would try for a grand slam; as it is, I am going to bid six no-trump and get in that extra 10 points. We need a good score and this is no time for shilly-shallying."

When the dummy hit the table, South rather wished that he had deferred a trifle further to Friday the 13th and settled for a six heart contract. Playing at hearts he could afford to play the ace of hearts first and then try for seven if both opponents followed.

At six no-trump the play of a high heart was a luxury he could not afford. He might wind up going down four tricks.

He led his three of hearts. West produced the deuce. South was just about to call for the jack from dummy when he suddenly reminded himself that it was still Friday the 13th and that maybe West would have all four hearts.

South called for dummy's nine and sure enough East showed out.

Now it was a simple matter for South to come back to his hand, finesse the jack of hearts and make seven no-trump for what turned out to be a real top score. It seems that the field had either gone down at no-trump or made exactly six hearts.

2-0 WIN OVER KCC 'A' PUTS SENIOR HOCKEY LEADERS FOUR POINTS IN THE LEAD

Macaensis 'A' yesterday avenged both their earlier-season hockey League and Cup defeats by KCC 'A' by defeating their rivals 2-0 in their second-round, First Division League match.

This gives them a four-point lead at the top of the table and the only team who can possibly catch them are Army 'A' whom they have yet to meet.

In the Second Division Section 'B', RAF went down 0-2 to Army 'C' to drop their first points of the season but they are already league section winners.

In Section 'A', Prisons, who have also already won their section, shared the points with Army 'B' and are now the only unbeaten team in the three leagues.

The semi-finals of the Gremlins Cup produced one surprise when Gremlins 'B' knocked out KCC. In the other match, Recreio and Gremlins 'A' drew 1-1.

KCC 'A' vs Macaensis 'A'

Macaensis 'A' thoroughly deserved their win in this match. They played the better hockey and had the better surface been smoother they might have done even better.

Their forward line always looked the more dangerous and inside-forwards Cumbs and Sequeira were always back helping out the defence when necessary. A. Capitulo was their mainstay in defence and always used the ball well.

KCC were well served at full-back by Chamberlain and Nery but some of their clearances were a little hasty when the ball could have been used to greater advantage.

Soares was safe in goal and had little chance with the two goals, both being scored from short range. Coffey was below form at centre-half and his usual well-placed passes to his forwards were sadly missing. Landells and Rowan came back and foraged for the ball but, for most of the game, the Macaensis wing-halves Valoma and Silva were in command on the wings.

Very little "feeling" crept into the game, and what there was was quickly stamped on by umpires Howe and Lall from whom both Rosa and L. Silva received cautions.

The game opened in ideal weather conditions, bright sun and a cool breeze, with the turf still damp and a bit rough particularly on one side.

The first few minutes were mainly confined to midfield with both defences on top of their opposing forwards but it was KCC who went close first. Landells took the ball upfield and passed to Sloan but Valoma intercepted and kicked to concede a short-corner.

From this Macaensis' goal-keeper Zoe Sequeira saved Nery's shot. KCC then had another free-hit just outside the circle but this was well cleared by Valoma.

In the 14th minute Macaensis were awarded a free-hit after a kick by Nery. The quickly taken hit sent L. Sequeira away but although he ran past Soares, he pushed the ball too far ahead and it rolled behind.

Three minutes later Sequeira and Ribas combined to go through and Tait conceded a short-corner by obstructing.

From this Sequeira's shot went behind off Soares for a corner and another short-corner followed but Ribas' shot was blocked and went flying over the goal.

KCC went back into the attack. A long clearance was missed by Cosia and A. Capitulo to let Careyford through but his reverse-stick shot hit the side of the post and went behind.

For the next few minutes it was Macaensis constantly on the attack and in the 25th minute Soares saved from J. Capitulo who regained possession and shot again but this time Tait cleared off the goal line.

Seven minutes later they took the lead. Valoma, taking a free-hit, sent Cunha away up the right wing and he took the ball to the goal line and pulled it back to J. Capitulo who made no mistake from short range.

The interval came with Macaensis just one goal ahead. The second half started with Macaensis maintaining the pressure but they could not find a way past Nery and Chamberlain who were tackling and clearing hard. Nery conceded a short-corner in the 40th minute but it went harmlessly across-field to touch.

KCC came back and fought hard for an equaliser. Coffey sent Careyford away up the left-wing and from his centre A, Capitulo kicked to concede a short-corner.

From this Zoe Sequeira saved twice from Nery and Valoma finally cleared upfield. KCC attacked again through Simoes and Landells and the ball went behind off Capitulo but he cleared the corner and sent a long ball upfield where Soares came out to the 7-yard line to clear.

The ding-dong struggle continued but both defences were on top. There was a spot of bother in the 58th minute between L. Silva and Rowan but umpire Howe pounced on it quickly and cautioned Silva. At this stage KCC appeared to be slightly on top with Macaensis playing a defensive game to retain their lead but in the 30th minute Macaensis broke away.

Valoma sent J. Capitulo away up the right wing and he ran past Nery and centred to the unmarked Sequeira who made the game safe for Macaensis from very close in. Just on full-time, Sequeira went through again, but he was badly obstructed by Soares and awarded the final whistle went as soon as it was taken.

It was a hard exciting encounter which Macaensis deserved to win and must have been thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of spectators.

The teams

KCC 'A': Soares, Chamberlain, Nery, Tait, Coffey, Simoes, Rosa, Landells, Sloan, Rowan, Careyford.

Macaensis 'A': Zoe Sequeira, L. Silva, Capitulo, Valoma, Cosia, Silva, J. Capitulo, Cunha, Ribas, L. Sequeira, Sa'Silva.

Recreio 'A' vs IRC 'A'

At Recreio, IRC 'A' fought back to earn a 3-3 draw after being 2-1 down at half-time. Unlike the KCC pitch the Recreio one was in a lovely condition, ideal for fast hockey and plenty of it was seen.

In the opening stages Recreio held the upper hand, with their forward line moving well, and in the eighth minute they went ahead through Colloco following a short-corner. They increased their lead in the 18th minute through E. Guterres playing in the unusual position of right-wing.

One minute later IRC reduced the arrears. O.K. Dallah was brought down by Pedruco when going through and, although the offence took place outside the circle a short-corner was awarded for a deliberate infringement and from this O.K. Dallah scored. There was no further score before the interval and afterwards the game continued at a very fast pace with the exchanges pretty even.

The next goal came in the 57th minute when IRC drew level. From a short-corner Macao Hockey Club scored.

The Macao Hockey Club will visit Hongkong next weekend. On Saturday they will play the Army and RAF respectively. On Sunday they play the KCC 'A' and 'B' sides. A further game at KCC follows in the evening. Tickets at $7 for the buffet dance at 7.30 pm and at $5.50 for the dance at 9.30 pm are on sale at KCC and will also be available at the door.

Karamdin shot hard and although Larcina touched it he could not prevent it entering the net.

Both sides fought hard for the lead and Recreio took it in the 60th minute through Castro after a scramble following a short-corner.

However, IRC drew level again two minutes later when Hussain put one of his forwards through to flick past Larcina and there the scores remained at full-time.

The teams

Recreio 'A': Larcina, Pedruco, Monteiro, Nolasco, Alonco, Souza, E. Guterres, Castro, A. Guterres, L. Guterres, Colloco.

IRC 'A': Ghafoor, Karamdin, Kitchell, Adem, Rahman, K. Dallah, Samy, O. K. Dallah, Hussain, Wahab, Hussain.

Army 'C' vs RAF

RAF went into this match already winners of their Section of the League but with their unbeaten record at stake, and Army

'C' duly proceeded to ruin the record by scoring a deserving 2-0 win.

The RAF were without two regular players but they never really got together as a team. The number of hits that went straight to an Army player had to be seen to be believed.

Ryan at centre-forward was very closely watched by the hard tackling Army defence in which Harris was always prominent. Stevenson on the RAF right wing saw little of the ball, in fact neither RAF wing really got going.

Elwood scored both of the Army's goals and, with Brierly, was outstanding in their forward line.

Army 'C' took a very early lead when in the second minute Harris sent a perfect pass through for Elwood to run through and shoot past Fisher.

From the bully Ryan went through for RAF and beat three defenders but his shot hit the side boards. They attacked again and forced two corners but could not press home the advantage.

The game continued with the exchanges even but the RAF seemed to concentrate too much on the ball up the middle where Ryan always had at least two Army defenders in attendance.

Half-time came with the Army holding their slender lead but they increased it five minutes after the interval. It was Elwood who scored again after Fisher had saved twice from O'Hara and Evans. For the remainder of the second half the RAF had most of the play and in the last five minutes had as many short-corners but the Army defence held out to run out deserving winners by 2-0.

The teams

Army 'C': Cook, Lee, Lancaster, Martindale, Harris, Arundel, O'Hara, Evans, Brierly, Elwood, Inglis.

RAF: Fisher, Sizer, Hutton, Thirnebeck, Nash, Price, Stevenson, Hanley, Ryan, Patrick, Hook.

Gremlins Cup

In the two semi-finals of the Gremlins Cup on Saturday, Gremlins 'B' surprisingly defeated KCC 2-1 and Recreio and Gremlins 'A' drew 1-1.

In the first match Gremlins 'B' were 2-0 up at half-time with goals from J. Weavill and D. Prior, and after the interval M. Fincher scored for KCC.

The match between Recreio and Gremlins 'A' was as close as the score suggests and very entertaining. It was a story of two strong defences being on top but Gremlins were handicapped by a first-half injury to their inside-left B. Muir. Recreio were also handicapped by the absence of their usual skipper and full-back E. Guterres who is temporarily out of the game.

Recreio were 1-0 up at half-time with a goal from M. Rozario following up a shot from M. Colloco which goal-keeper M. Muir could only partially clear.

Gremlins levelled the scores just after the interval through B. Daniels after a scramble in Recreio's goalmouth. The replay will be at King's Park next Saturday.

Alleged demand for $20 to repair wires

Two employees of the Hongkong Electric Company Ltd, an electrician and a coolie, charged with attempting to obtain $20 as an inducement for repairing electric wirings, appeared before Mr K. A. S. Phillips at Causeway Bay Court this morning.

Father who beat boy, cautioned

Jailed on second charge

A 39-year-old father who was charged with ill-treating his 10-year-old son by beating him in a manner likely to cause unnecessary suffering or injury, was cautioned by Mr Derek Cons at Central Court this morning.

But, the man, Yeung Chi-chau, living in an unnumbered hut on Mount Davis, was sent to jail for one month for breach of a deportation order. He was deported for ten years about eight years ago.

Referring to a report from the probation officer, Mr Cons said although Yeung's son was a bad boy he should not have beaten him in such a way but should have reported to the Secretary for Chinese Affairs or the Welfare Office for proper advice.

Mr Cons, however, discharged Yeung on the "caution" charge taking into account that Yeung had been detained in custody for several days.

The Prosecution had stated at a previous hearing that a patrolling policeman found the boy crying in Queen's-road West at 3 am last Wednesday. He refused to go home and said that he was frightened of being beaten again by his father, who had beaten him on many previous occasions.

The reason the father gave for beating the boy was that whenever the boy was given money and asked to buy things, he went to a cinema or bought comics.

The boy was said to have been beaten with a rope and was found to have bruises on his body.

JAPANESE FREIGHTER SINKS OFF COLONY

This dramatic picture shows the Yoshiura Maru, in its last moments before she plunged to the bottom stern-first, off the Po Toi Islands yesterday. A rescue ship is tying off, waiting to pick up survivors.

SUNKEN SHIP, CARGO WORTH $700,000

The 500-ton Japanese ship which sank off the Colony yesterday and its cargo were worth a total of about $700,000, it was learned today.

The cargo ship, Yoshiura Maru No. 5, sprung a leak and went down southwest of Hong Kong near the Po Toi Islands at about 12.30 pm yesterday. The ship was valued at $400,000 and the cargo, $300,000. The cargo consisted of 400 tons of scrap iron, seven tons of cod liver oil and four tons of general cargo, according to the Chief Officer, Mr Mitsuyoshi Hasegawa, 40.

RESCUED

The Captain, Mr M. Nasuyama, 46, has been busy this morning reporting to the Japanese Consulate-General and the Immigration Office.

The entire crew, 15, including the skipper, were rescued by the Norwegian ship, Bronxville, and the Japanese ship, Oregon Maru. They are staying at Tai Tung Hotel, Connaught-road West.

As yet they do not know when they would be repatriated.

HK buys three million pounds of tobacco

Hong Kong bought about three million pounds weight of tobacco from Southern Rhodesia last year, according to Mr Colin J. Graham, of the Salisbury tobacco exporters of Slemmen Maunders Private, Ltd.

Mr Graham, who is in Hong Kong for the first time for the Southern Rhodesian tobacco exporters, arrived by Air-India from Calcutta today.

Mr Graham said he came to Hong Kong to try to sell more Rhodesian tobacco to the Colony.

TENANCY TRIBUNAL

A nine-storey building costing $350,000 is planned to replace Nos. 1-3, Tung Fong-street, at the corner of Pitt-street in Kowloon.

Mr W. Aneurin-Jones, President of Tenancy Tribunal comprising Mr Lo Kung-mok and Mr H. Y. Hsu, this morning examined plans prepared by Mr E. Y. Wu, architect.

The applicants, Messrs Ho Yu-lam, Wing Chan and Lam Che-kai were represented at the hearing by F. Zimmerman and Co. Proceedings continue.

Three generations of acrobats in show

A family comprising three generations of jugglers, unicyclists and acrobats, who performed before the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh in 1960, arrived by Air-India from Calcutta today for a one to three-month engagement in a local night club. The family of Mr Ronald Britton, 51, from Adelaide, Australia, also entertained the Shah and the Queen of Iran four months ago at the Shah's palace in Tehran.

Fined for betting on football match

Ho Cho-hei, a 35-year-old man of 6 Ching Fung-street was pleaded guilty to accepting bets on yesterday's football match between Tung Wah and Eastern, was fined $150 by Mr T. L. Yang at Causeway Bay Court this morning.

Inspector Y. C. Lam told the court that at about 12.40 pm yesterday a police inspector saw a crowd gathered round the defendant who was writing something down in a book.

The defendant was taken to the station for further questioning, where he admitted that he had accepted bets on the result of the football match between Tung Wah and Eastern which was played yesterday afternoon.

The sums wagered were between $1 and $28, Inspector Lam said.

The hottest thing in Europe

"The Orient is about the hottest thing in Europe and the United States," Mr Manuel Dixon, President of the Society of Philippine Travel Agencies said on his arrival from New York by Air-India this morning.

Mr Dixon, who is also Sales Manager of the Philippine Travel Bureau, Manila, added that travel agents in Europe and the United States had started a special campaign to popularize travel to the Orient. The Philippines travel agent planned to remain in Hong Kong a few days before returning to his native Manila.

Three generations of acrobats in show

The Brittons who are in Hong Kong for the first time, consist of Ronald and his wife, their son Desmond and his wife and the two-year old Clinton, who is the senior Britton's grandson.

Mr David S. K. Chan, Manager of Princess Garden Restaurant and Night Club, who was at the airport meeting the Brittons, said the family will appear in his night club beginning on Thursday night.

Official driving schools needed? Magistrate's view

The human element was the real cause of most accidents and it would be interesting to know the basis on which the tram and bus companies selected drivers and what percentage of potential drivers proved finally suitable, a magistrate said today.

Mr I. T. Morris said this when he passed judgment on So Chiam, motorman of the Hongkong Tramways Ltd, found guilty of failing to stop when necessary in order to avoid impending danger. So was fined $200 or 7 weeks' jail.

Mr Morris in his judgment, supported the suggestion that people convicted of serious traffic offences should be required to attend a driving school first of all, for advice on the driving which caused their appearance in Court and then to receive instructions with the object of improving their standard of driving.

UPKEEP

Obviously, in order that this procedure could be introduced, official driving schools would have to be established throughout the Colony and the cost of their upkeep should be met largely from fees paid by persons required to attend.

Chief Inspector J. E. Hidden attached to the CID had told the Court in a previous hearing that on November 12 he was driving his car along Des Voeux-road central in a westerly direction.

As he neared the Chartered Bank he turned right intending to stop outside Prince's Building but as there were pedestrians on the road, he was forced to stop and reverse his car for about a yard which placed the rear wheels of his car on the tram tracks.

His car remained stationary. He saw the defendant driving the tramcar and proceeding slowly towards him. Inspector Hidden waited for the road to clear before moving, but before he could so do the tramcar collided with the side of his car.

The wing of the car was badly dented and the rear lamp smashed.

The defendant said at a previous hearing that he was driver of the tramcar on the day in question but denied failing to stop to avoid impending danger.

He had cut off current because another tramcar was in front of him. He also saw the Inspector's car outside Prince's Building, and it was 50-60 feet away from his tram and said that at a distance of seven to eight feet he saw the Inspector's stationery car suddenly reverse. He then applied the air brake and the emergency brake but was unable to avoid the collision that followed.

Mr A. K. W. Lui of Lo and Lo represented the defendant, who pleaded not guilty.

Inspector M. R. Atkinson appeared for the prosecution.

Review of sentence refused by Bench

An application for review of a three-month sentence passed on a Pakistani police constable found guilty of having carnal knowledge of a 15-year-old girl, was refused by Mr E. Corbally at Central Court this morning.

In his application, Mr J. C. B. Slack of Deacons, said his client, 28-year-old Abdul Ghafer, had been in the Police force for more than eight years with a clear record.

Ghafer was allowed, under the laws of his religion, to marry more than one wife. Mr Slack said, and the defendant and the girl were very much in love.

Mr Slack further pointed out that, while in the witness box, the complainant appeared reluctant to answer questions from either the prosecution or the defence. This attitude, he well suggest that she was not behaving as she normally would. Mr Slack added. He asked the Magistrate to take all these facts into consideration.

Refusing the application, Mr Corbally said all these points had already been considered when he passed the original sentence.

From the Files

25 years AGO

February 1936

MR Anthony Eden, replying to questions by Mr Chorlton, Conservative MP for Plating, and Dr E. I. Burgin, Liberal MP for Luton, said that organisers of the British Trade Fair in Hong Kong had formed an influential committee in Britain to get into touch with prospective exhibitors.

With regard to the Government's attitude towards the Exhibition, the Governor of Hong Kong had accepted the position of patron and the British Consul-General for Canton, and the Commercial Secretary for South China, had been authorised to accept positions as members of the Council of the Trade Fair.

In an editorial commenting on the Fair project, the Morning Post said it was a commercial venture and the Fair did not have the full support of the Hong Kong community. The General Chamber of Commerce said that a canvas taken by the Chamber revealed that none of the principal firms of the Colony holding important British agencies had promised support.

And many firms are doubtful whether a Trade Fair in the Colony is an effective means of developing trade in China.

If it were, the proper place to hold it would be in China, where all exhibits would be priced in local currency, with duty and all other charges included.

The Morning Post added in a critical editorial that the Hong Kong Government was partly to blame for the misunderstanding in Britain. "Official patronage of any enterprise should lead to no misunderstanding; preferably such enterprise should be confined to projects unquestionably of a public kind."

It is notified for general information that during the absence from the Colony of Mr Geoffrey Milkin, Mr Cedric Blaker will act as Vice-Consul for Sweden in Hong Kong.
